600,000 Boys To Register In New Draft Dec. 11 to 31

President Orders
Youths Attaining
18 Years by End
Of 1942 To Be Listed

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Moving to put all the provisions of the new teen-age draft into effect, President Roosevelt yesterday ordered the approximately 600,000 youths who become 18 years old during the last half of this year to register between December 11 and December 31.

The registration will be the sixth to be held since the original passage of a Selective Service Act in the summer of 1940 and will complete the listing of all the country's manpower from slightly below 18 to above 65.

The following schedule will be followed in registering the teenagers:

Youths with birthdays between July 1 and August 31—to register between December 11 and 17.

Youths with birthdays between September 1 and October 31—to register between December 18 and 24.

Youths with birthdays between November 1 and December 31—to register between December 25 and 31.

Other youths who are still unregistered will be required to register as they reach 18—on their birthdays.

A Nation-wide lottery will be avoided because the teen-agers will be called up according to their birthdays.

Meanwhile, Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey ordered local draft boards to defer high school students in the 18-and-19-year groups if the students request it, and if they are in the last half of the autumn-spring year.

Hershey also directed local boards to begin preparing immediately to induct 18 and 19-year olds already registered.

Acting simultaneously to safeguard farm labor, Hershey directed the boards to defer all necessary farm workers engaged in essential agriculture.

The teen-age draft law made this action mandatory.
The Selective Service board also authorized the deferment of all men who registered before age 45 who have passed their forty-fifth birthday unless they file a written request to be inducted.

25 Die After Eating U. S. Surplus Eggs

Salem, Oreg., Nov. 18 (AP)—Dr. J.
C. Evans, superintendent of the Oregon State Hospital for the Insane, said tonight that 25 working inmates were dead from eating poisoned food and that 400 were ill.
Dr. Evans said all the patients had eaten at dinner tonight eggs given the institution by the Federal Government from surplus stocks.

It was the first time the eggs had been served and the first illness was reported within 15 minutes after dinner. The first death came an hour later, he said.

Dr. Evans said the eggs were served in four wards which were occupied by inmates who work around the hospital. There was no illness in other wards where the eggs were not served, he said.

The illnesses, Dr. Evans said,
"apparently are the result of ptomaine poisoning caused by some decomposition in the eggs. I described them as 'an extreme gastro-intestinal disturbance.'"

The eggs were packed in tin cans.
Among the 25 dead were two women inmates. One regular employee of the hospital staff, who also had the eggs for dinner, was ill.
Dr. Evans said he feared there would be more deaths.

Loss of Savings Makes Furlough Bleak Affair

Staff Sgt. Luther P. Stroud, after 13 months in Newfoundland, arrived in Washington yesterday for a long awaited furlough.

But today Newfoundland doesn't seem like such a bad place after all. For he is minus $972, a driver's license and away from home, which was his goal when he started back to civilization.

Yesterday Sergeant Stroud attempted to rent a car from Hertz Drive-Yourself System, at 1319 L Street Northwest. He told Harry Friend that he wanted to drive to North Carolina to see his mother.

But Stroud was only gone a few minutes when he dashed madly back asking for his wallet containing his carefully saved funds.
Friend searched and the cab driver scheduled to conduct Stroud to Alexandria searched, but no wallet was found.

Dairy Products Face Reduction In Milk Content

Cheese, Ice Cream
On List Involved
To Save Bottled Fluid

Plans are being drawn to reduce the quantity of milk going into such dairy by-products as cheese, ice cream, buttermilk and flavored milks in order to preserve the dividing supply of bottled fluid milk available for domestic consumption, it was learned yesterday.

Bottled fluid milk has been placed at the top of the list of essential dairy products by the Department of Agriculture, which is preparing to drastically cut the supply of by-products to maintain production of fluid milk.

The whole problem was dumped in the lap of the Food Requirements committee—Joint Department of Agriculture, War Production Board group—yesterday, but no final decision was reached. Another meeting of the committee will be held tomorrow with some definitive action, possibly limited rationing of some products expected shortly.

It is understood that consideration is being given to reducing the amount of milk and cream allotted to ice cream production by 25 per cent. It is considered possible, however, that an actual reduction in the amount of ice cream placed on sale may be avoided by the expedited reducing of the butter-

Uphill Struggle

Less Talk, More Results Urged As War Fund Drive Lags

Washington's Community War Fund drive for more than four million dollars was still lagging yesterday as officials pleaded for less talk and more results.

Edwin S. Graham, who presided at a meeting of the board of directors, said:

"There is no lack of heart or lack of criticism in the final phases of this first Community War Fund Campaign. We cannot and shall not fail to put Washington in the place it deserves as leader in responding to the cause of human values among the cities of the Nation."

With one-sixth of the goal still lacking, the Government Unit now needs $242,912 or about 12 per cent of their quota in order to achieve victory.

Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior and chairman of the unit, sent an urgent bulletin to every one of the 6500 keymen, asking them for the final spurt of working enthusiasm which will result in 100 per cent response from Federal employees.

Group Tables Bill to Remove War Handicaps

Powers Requested
By Roosevelt Are Reserved for Congress

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

The House Ways and Means Committee late yesterday turned thumbs down on President Roosevelt's request for new broad war powers, and instead cleared the way for Congress to make its own decision on what legislative barriers to the war effort should be lifted.

Hearings Scheduled
The committee tabled a bill giving the President blanket authority to suspend "for the duration" tariff and immigration laws, and other statutes which he found were holding up the war effort.

At the same time, the group agreed to appointment of a seven-member subcommittee which will start tomorrow to hear additional testimony from Federal civil and military officials about what laws are now hampering war activity, and to write compromise legislation.

There was no intention, committee members asserted, to kill the President's program, or to delay it past the end of the present session of Congress.

Expiration Date Proposed Instead, the committee balked at giving the President the blanket powers he asked, and took the view that if any laws or regulations were to be lifted, Congress should say through legislation how the job was to be done.

Motion tabling the President's program and setting up the subcommittee for investigation were approved by what members said was unanimous consent, after a day-long closed session marked by testimony from Attorney General Biddle, and high officials of the War, Navy, Treasury, and State Departments.

The Federal officials were said to have agreed in principle with a proposed amendment to set December 31 as the expiration date.

Fifth Day of Conflict

Poll Tax Filibusters Confident Of Blocking Senate Action

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Filibustering foes of the anti-poll tax bill last night were confident they have enough votes to block formal action to close Senate debate on the legislation, a circumstance that led competent observers to anticipate death for the measure and victory for the filib-usters sometime next week.

No entirely reliable forecast could be made, however, of the time and conditions under which the bill is likely to die, until a scheduled conference of filibusters decides today upon the next step to be taken in their bitter fight against the measure's ban on the poll-tax qualification for voters in Federal elections in eight Southern States.

The question before the conference will be whether to permit the bill to come before the Senate for consideration and then to defeat a cloture resolution, thus giving Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat) of Kentucky, as great a measure of accomplishment as they believe he can possibly achieve.

The filibuster moved through its fifth day yesterday in a session distinguished by:

1. The second outbreak in two days of personal bitterness between Senators, featuring an angry outburst from Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, against Senator Norris (Independent) of Nebraska, advocate of the bill.

2. The appearance of Senator
White (Republican) of Maine, on the side of the filibustering Senators—to the extent of joining in their attack on the propriety of the action of the Judiciary Committee in reporting the bill favorably without a physical quorum being present.

Although the Japanese admissions were sweeping for Tokyo,
they did not include all the losses
the Americans officially announced were inflicted on Nippon's forces.
Claim Yanks Routed
Tokyo listed as sunk a battleship, the first time in the war that Japan has made such an admission, a cruiser and three destroyers. The imperial headquarters then put down as damaged another battleship and seven transports.

In the crushing defeat at Midway, where an invasion spearhead aimed at Hawaii and perhaps the American West Coast was turned back, the Japanese admitted losing only one aircraft carrier sunk and a cruiser damaged.

Tokyo sugarcoated its bad news today with an extravagant and unsupported claim that the American Navy was routed and forced to flee.
The damaging admissions apparently were smothered off by official United States accounts of the victory over the Japanese in the Solomons last week.

Draft Spread

U. S. Agencies Fear Depletion As Result of Deferment Loss

(U. S. workers told to wait on draft. (See Jerry Klutz's

Top Government officials yesterday expressed the fear that the President's order cancelling the occupational draft deferments of all Government employees would deplete many agencies of key operating personnel and possibly result in the militarization of some of them.

In the wake of the order which was apparently issued on the President's own initiative without consulting the agencies most affected, the following developments took place:

1. A number of key persons in Government agencies took steps to apply for Army or Navy commissions.

2. The War Manpower Commission devoted a portion of its weekly session to the order with members fearing that local draft boards would accept the order as a signal to end all occupational deferments—for private as well as public employees.

3. Army and Navy sought clarification of the status of workers in their arsenals and shore establishments to avoid a possible rush of their industrial workers to private industry where occupational deferments have been granted as a matter of course.

Among those expected to be hardest hit by strict enforcement of the order are the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Office of Price Administration and the Board of Economic Warfare. Some officials expressed the fear that these agencies would then have to turn to the Army and Navy, which would have many of their key persons ask for them back. Conceivably in this fashion, a number of agencies could easily be militarized, some officials declared.

In the case of the FBI, whose functions are already semi-military in character, militarization would be "inevitable," a number of informed officials stated.

Selective Service and War Manpower Commission were reported particularly concerned about the effect of the order on the attitude of local draft boards. At present, the two agencies are engaged in an effort to educate draft boards to place more emphasis on occupational deferment. One official declared that this order would amount to a directive to draft boards to ignore previous instructions with respect to occupational deferment.

Inquiries at Selective Service, War Manpower Commission and Civil Service Commission failed to uncover any official who knew precisely how the new presidential order was to be applied or who would administer machinery to put it into effect. As announced by the President, the order forbids the granting of deferments to Government workers without his expressed permission.

Tokyo Admits Heavy Losses In Solomons

8 U. S. Cruisers Sunk,
2 Battleships Damaged,
Japanese Radio Claims

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 18.—Japan made her broadest admission of naval losses of the war today, apparently recognizing the futility of attempting to hide her disaster in the Solomons, but linked it with fantastic claims of damage inflicted in order to make the news as palatable as possible.

Although the Japanese admissions were sweeping for Tokyo,
they did not include all the losses

Pétain Makes Laval Dictator In Vichy Crisis

Decree Expected To Bring a New Reign of Terror

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 18.—Pierre Laval, who has thrown in his chips for a German victory, was made Fascist dictator of Vichy France and designed successor to Marshal Philippe Pétain tonight. Observers predicted a new terror reign and a desperate effort by Laval to swing France militarily into the Axis fold.

The 86-year-old Pétain named Laval his heir presumptive to replace Admiral Jean Darlan who went over to the Allied standard in French North Africa, and gave Laval full powers to write his own laws and decrees.

Significantly the vesting of full powers in the wily Laval came after the cabinet heard a report from Rear Admiral Rene Platon, a Secretary of State in the Foreign Ministry, on the latter's trip to Tunisia.

Admiral Platon presumably outlined the prospects of rallying French Tunisians to the Axis camp at a time when American and British troops are fighting their way into that protectorate. German and Italian troops already hold the Bizerte-Tunis area apparently in cooperation with pro-Axis Vichy elements.

An official Vichy announcement by Pétain said he was giving full

False Raid Alarm Gives D. C. Jitters

Washingtonians living in the southeast and northeast areas were given a mild case of jitters last night when an air-raid siren nearby accidentally sounded off during a test of control centers. Wardens ran to their posts and residents were ordered to douse their lights as police scout cars dashed through the streets.

'Trifling to Serious'

50 More Gas Bootleggers Believed Uncovered in D. C.

Office of Price Administration investigators have uncovered large number of additional cases of gasoline bootlegging in the District of Columbia ranging from "very trifling to very serious" infractions of the rationing regulations, an O.P.A. official said yesterday.

At least 150 gasoline distributors, including filling stations, garages and parking lots have been checked with a sizeable proportion of violations uncovered, it was said. Although all the reports of the investigators have not been tabulated, the official stated that "it possibly may reach 50."

He pointed out that a similar investigation in Baltimore had uncovered more than 40 violations out of 60 inspections.

The probe thus far indicates that some dealers are accepting gasoline coupons before they are due, and that others are selling gasoline without any coupons.

Both violations have been uncovered by discovering inventory shortages indicating that supplies are considerably less than they should be.

The investigation was launched on Saturday and is scheduled to continue until December 1.

It is understood that O.P.A. plans to institute criminal charges where-ever the evidence reveals deliberate violations. In most cases, however, hearings will be held first to decide whether individual dealers' licenses to sell gasoline should be suspended or revoked.

O.P.A. has the right to limit dramatically deliveries to any dealer or to put him out of business altogether. At the same time, the agency has resort to the courts where heavy penalties ranging up to a fine of $10,000 and 10 years in jail may be levied.

The investigation was originally designed to smash a reported
"black market" in S (service) coupons which have been freely issued to commercial vehicles. These S coupons will expire on December 1.
Violations uncovered indicate that a number of other "leaks" of gasoline into bootleg channels exist.

Closing In

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 18.—Allied and liberated French troops made contact tonight with the Germans in a drive toward Bizerte, where American Flying Fortresses already had attacked with their first sweep in force on the North African front, and Allied paratroops captured a vital airdrome deep in Tunisia.

In the initial contact, German patrols were battered back in clashes foreshadowing the start of the battle to decide the fate of the Mediterranean.

British and American advance forces were within 70 miles of the Bizerte naval base, claimed by the Germans as "captured."

The Allies also had crossed the Tunisian frontier at several points.
The French, under command of Gen. Henri Honoré Giraud, were moving with them, and garrisons inside Tunisia were fighting the Germans and striving for a union with the east-bound Allies.

The gap between the British First Army in Tunisia and the Eighth Army sweeping Rommel before it in Libya narrowed to 800 miles as the forces of Gen.
Sir Bernard L. Montgomery drove to within 70 miles of Bengasi.

Bizerte Gas Stocks Bombed
A third powerful Allied force was reported striking north from Lake Chad toward Tripoli over 1000 miles of Libyan desert, slamming shut a triangular trap on the Axis troops still at large in North Africa.

"Heavy fighting" still lies ahead of the Allies, a British military commentator said, and reports that Hitler was massing 1000 planes and moving troops from Russia to the Mediterranean Basin bore this out.

The fortresses exploded gasoline and munition dumps in Bizerte, where the Germans boasted they held the initiative. They also destroyed grounded planes. At the same time the B. A. F. sent anti-aircraft guns shot down 11 Nazi aircraft in three days near Bone, Algeria, while protecting the advancing Allied troops.

An Allied communique said advance elements of the British First Army, British and United States paratroop troops and French Allied forces have entered Tunisia at several points.

"Contacts have been made with enemy scouting parties," the communique added.

Great Parachutist Exploit
These developments were reported tonight from the thick of battle fast shaping up in Tunisia for control of the air, land and sea lanes to Tripoli, last possible refuge of the disorganized Axis desert armies.

The fortress raid, in which Axis supplies were blown up in the key naval air base, was the first carried out in force by the big American bombers in Africa, although Brig-Gen. Jimmy Doolittle already had had a taste of combat in a Fortress en route to the new battle-front.

The parachutist exploit far inside Tunisia was described in an Allied headquarters communique as one of the most important airborne operations ever accomplished.

The "chutists were dropped to "prepare the way for Allied forces."
From Stockholm by wire of Berne, Switzerland, came reports that units of the German fleet have left Norway with the probable intention of trying to cut the Allied supply lines to North Africa.

Nazi planes stationed in Norway already have been rushed to bases in Italy for the battle of North Africa, these reports said.

The Germans boasted that Axis troops had occupied Bizerte and seized the initiative in Tunisia.

British Expect Axis Stand At El Agheila

By Paul Kern Lee
Associated Press Staff Writer
Cairo, Nov. 18.—The fleeing Axis army in Libya, with only 15 of its 500 first-line tanks left, reeled back today to within 70 miles of Bengasi with the British Eighth Army in pursuit on a broad front toward the El Agheila defense for what may well be the knockout punch.

Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, Middle East commander, said he expected Marshal Rommel's army to make a temporary stand there, but added:

"I don't think his present army can stand for long, unless reinforced. The enemy is groggy but not knocked out. The battle will be ours until the enemy is lying senseless."

Great Vise Closing

The battle of El Agheila, on the base of the Libyan hump and the eastern end of the Gulf of Sirte 400 miles from Tripoli, is expected in about a week. The Eighth Army advanced 80 miles yesterday to within 230 miles of El Agheila and about 800 miles from the western boundary of Tunisia, where the British First Army and the flying American columns are pressing eastward, closing the jaws of a great vise.

For the first time in days, Axis planes were found in the desert near Bengasi, and 12 were destroyed without Allied loss. Six were huge transports shot from the air; the others were destroyed on the ground. Allied bombers attacked Bengasi at low level, firing bombs in the harbor.

Portions of the Eighth Army were pursuing Rommel's remnants in the vicinity of Barce. Another column was driving along a desert shortcut south of the green coastal mountains from captured El Mechili toward Mus and El Agheila beyond.

Alexander said the Axis was unable to use the shortcut because not much of Rommel's transport remains "desert-worthy." Rommel has lost 75,000 of his first line troops and the great bulk of his equipment. British casualties total only 13,600.

May Be Reinforced

The British commander said Rommel may have received a trickle of tank reinforcements.

"He may have got some at Bengasi and he had repair shops back along the route; so it is very difficult to answer exactly how many tanks he has presently," he said.

El Agheila is flanked by the sea and boggy salt marshes and is a strong defense position, comparable to El Alamein, where the offensive started.

The enemy, Alexander said, "will undoubtedly try a strong rear-guard action there while trying to withdraw and re-form the remainder of his forces at Tripoli."

He praised the new American-made Sherman tank as "grand and as good as any on the battlefield—our troops love it."

65 D. C. Women To Be Inducted As WAACS Today

Sixty-five Washington women will be inducted as WAACS at the formal guard mount ceremonies at the Ellipse at 5 p. m. today and later eat their first Army mess with members of a military police unit.

Lieut. Ellen Grayriggs, Washington head of the Auxiliary Territorial Service, British Women's organization comparable to the WAACS, will be a special guest. Other guests will include Mrs. Mark Wayne Clark and Mrs. C. C. Clark, wife and mother, respectively, of Lieut. Gen. Mark Wayne Clark, and Lieut. Helen Hamilton Woods, acting assistant director of the WAACS.

The regular guard mount ceremony, held Thursday afternoon at 5 p. m. at the Ellipse, will have special trimmings this time. The full Army Band in formal Army blues, will play. After the guard mount by the White House guard, the WAACS will be sworn in by Lieut. Julia M. Kerby and Lieut. Marian L. MacAdam, Washington WAAC recruiting officers. The newly inducted WAACS will witness the retreat ceremony and then dine with the M. P.'s.

The women will receive special orders placing them on the reserve list, to be called to active duty for training at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, or Daytona Beach, Fla.

Allies Take Tunisia Airdrome as Flying Forts Blast Bizerte

while the veterans of Dunkerque in the British First Army drove toward Bizerte and a flying column of Americans was reported knifing across the waist of Tunisia in the direction of Tripoli on a move to trap some 10,000 Germans and Italians hastily put there for a desperate defense.

British sources which must remain anonymous said the enemy was massing 10,000 planes in Sicily, Sardinia, southern Italy and Crete for the imminent air fight for Tunisia.

Withdrawals From Russia
Moreover, Hitler was reported by the Moscow radio to be withdrawing troops from the Russian front to bolster the exposed southern rim of Europe. Nearly all passenger trains in Hungary and Croatia were reported canceled. Troops were reported passing through Sicily and Genoa, the bomb-battered supply port of north Italy.

American parachute troops as well as British participated in the air-borne operations. From an advanced base in North Africa came reports that United States parachute troops had taken an Algerian airdrome near a small town on the Tunisian frontier. The British were said to have occupied one deep inside Tunisia.

It seemed clear that the Allied advance was in two directions. A predominantly British force was advancing along the Mediterranean toward Bizerte and Tunis. A second force composed mostly of Americans was slicing diagonally through central Tunisia by way of Tebessa and Gafsa toward Gabes and Tripoli.

Allied strategists did not underestimate the Axis strength in Tunisia. A British military commentator said frankly that the Allies can expect "heavy fighting" there.

If Axis claims of holding stoutly fortified Bizerte were true, a large-scale clash of arms for that naval base appeared imminent. The British and Americans were expected to attack vigorously before the Germans and Italians could consolidate and reinforce the defenses. The enemy, depending on air-borne reinforcements, was not believed to have a formidable force.

Battle at Tunis
Reuters reported a battle in progress for control of the military airdrome at Tunis, some 80 miles southeast of Bizerte. The field has been bombed repeatedly by planes from Malta.

Some credence was lent to this report by the sudden silence of the Tunis radio, which had said it was shutting down to save power. More likely, it was believed, parachutists had compelled the shutdown.

The North African coup gained 200,000 to 300,000 tons of shipping for the Allies, the British ministry of economic warfare announced.

YANKS ON THE MARCH
Scattered reports picture the Allies in a two-way drive in Tunisia. British-American troops advancing from Bone (broken pointers) appeared heading for a major clash at Bizerte and Tunis. Meanwhile, the Allies were reported advancing from Tebessa (broken pointer) toward Gafsa from whence they could go to (shaded pointers) Sfax or Gabes, dividing the Axis forces. From Gabes, they might strike at Tripoli, major Axis port in Libya.

Nazis Stopped In Stalingrad Factory Area

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Thursday), Nov. 19.—German tank and infantry attacks on the factory district of Stalingrad, which the Nazis are attempting to capture for winter headquarters, were beaten off again yesterday and counterattacking Russians seized several enemy strong points, the Russians announced early today.

"In the course of the engagement more than 600 enemy troops were killed or wounded," the Soviet midnight communique said. "Eight German tanks were burned or disabled, nine guns, 12 mortars, 24 machine-guns and 11 dugouts and blockhouses were destroyed."

The battle for the factory area of the ruined city represents the latest German attempt to gain a firm foothold in the Volga metropolis.

Only yesterday the Russians said the Germans had lost from 1000 to 4000 men daily for three weeks and from 60 to 75 per cent of the personnel of the attacking divisions in a supreme but vain effort to carry out Adolf Hitler's orders ing to land at a point on the Russian coast were driven off by French batteries.

"A general mobilization order for the class of 1939 has been issued by the French authorities in North Africa. At Oran French troops leaving for the east were accompanied to the train by an escort of honor and music from the United States forces there."

"4. R. A. F. bombers have attacked objectives in Tunisia occupied by the enemy. United States B-17's, cooperating with the First Army and the R. A. F., have made a daylight raid on the airfield at Bizerte."

"5. In the Bone area 11 enemy aircraft are known to have been destroyed in the course of attack on November 15, 16 and 17. Five were shot down by R. A. F. fighters and six by anti-aircraft fire. Three of our fighters were lost but two of the pilots are safe."

"6. The hunting of submarines by ships of the Royal Navy, naval aircraft and R. A. F. continues, with considerable success."

President Roosevelt's statement that no permanent agreement can be made with Admiral Jean Darlan, former Vichy defense minister who now is acting under American supervision, caused no surprise at headquarters.

"Our job is to push the war against the Germans, not to become involved in political discussions," was the way one officer put it.

The full text of the latest War Department communique, issued in Washington, follows:

"North Africa:
"1. Advance elements of the British First Army, together with British and U. S. paratroops and French forces operating with us, have entered Tunisia at several points. Contacts have been made with enemy scouting parties."

"2. General Giraud has visited the leading French units. One enemy plane was shot down by French anti-aircraft fire yesterday. German transport planes attempt-to take Stalingrad by November 6. The Germans, balked in that drive, regrouped and for the last week have concentrated on the factory district. Thus far, the Russians reported yesterday, the enemy has gained only a few yards.

The midnight communique reported slight Russian triumphs in the general Stalingrad area, and northwest of Stalingrad. It said the Russians dislodged the Germans from positions northeast of Tuapse, on the Caucasus Black Sea coast.

In Solomons Writer Sees Yanks Fell 20 Zeros

By Serg. E. J. Burman
Marine Corps Combat Correspondent
Distributed by Associated Press
Gundala, Solomon Islands,
Oct. 23 (Delayed).—Twenty Japanese Zero planes were blasted out of the skies today as Marine Corps fighter pilots walloped Nipponese airmen in a stirring air battle. (Previously announced in Navy Department communique No. 167.)

Not a single American plane was lost in the action. In addition to the 20 Zeros, one Japanese bomber was downed and three departed smoking badly, bringing to 315 the total of enemy aircraft brought down by our planes since the beginning of air activity in the Solomons.

It was a day marked by beautiful dogfights and thrilling aerobics. Twisting, turning, rolling, looping, climbing and diving, like homicidal hawks run amok, the pilots performed all the combat tricks they knew to knock down their opponents.

Individual high scorer of the day was Capt. Joseph J. Foss, U. S. M. C., of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., who bagged four Zeros, bringing his total to date to 10 Zeros and one bomber.

The Japanese escorted bombers, which were forced to make their run at a great height to avoid the accurate hammering of antiaircraft batteries.

The dogfights were thrilling to watch. We saw one Zero explode into bits, another go down blazing and out of control. Still another Zero broke in two, making two separate flaming torches.

Several Jap fighters took to their parachutes. One chute burst into flames immediately after the pilot bailed out of his flaming ship. Much of the action occurred over the ocean. Great columns of water rose high in the air as each Jap plane hit.

Captain Foss modestly recounted his part in the battle when it was over. As he described it, he turned into a group of Zeros and nailed the first one from behind. He got on the tail of a second Jap plane and bagged it with a burst.

Split seconds later, he polished off a Zero which was on the tail of a Grumman, and then shot down his fourth victim who had made the mistake of passing him from behind.

A broken oil line forced Captain Foss to turn back to the airfield. When asked what impressions passed through his mind during the fight, Captain Foss would only say: "It's a good feeling to get them in your sights."

Tonazzi Replaced As War Minister Of Argentina

Buenos Aires, Nov. 18 (AP).—General Juan Tonazzi, Argentine War Minister, resigned suddenly last night to the surprise of the Argentine public. But political observers said the rapid appointment of Gen. Pedro Ramirez to succeed him indicated that President Ramon S. Castillo had been prepared for such a contingency.

General Ramirez, who had six years of training with the German army before the first World War, succeeded General Tonazzi.

Some sources said that Tonazzi's decision to resign was based on a question of personal disagreement with President Castillo over the appointment of army commanders.

Africa to Give Allies New Bases, Says New Zealand Envoy

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt and the members of the Pacific War Council yesterday envisioned mass bombing raids to knock Italy out of the war. Walter Nash, the New Zealand Minister, described the prospective air raids on Mussolini's war-weary country as a "ninth front." He listed the other eight fronts as Russia, North Africa, the Middle East, New Guinea, Burma, China, the Solomon Islands and the Atlantic.

Significantly, perhaps, this talk of great air raids on Italy, flowing from a White House council of war, came at a time when other efforts were being made to talk Italy into getting out of the war.

In a New York speech last Saturday, Adolf A. Berle, Assistant Secretary of State, appealed to Italy to throw off her Fascist masters and free the country from the "Nazi tyrants beyond the Alps."

The White House suggestion of force, coupled with Berle's appeal, may not be so paradoxical as it seems, for Berle told the Italians that Allied force was the only alternative to revolt. He said:

"While Italians, however blindly, follow Fascist leadership, there can be no valid dealing save by force."

Minister Nash, on emerging from President Roosevelt's office yesterday, said the meeting of the Pacific War Council just concluded was "the most interesting we have ever had."

Much of it, he said, was devoted to the "ninth front." After describing the Anglo-American drive to take over all Africa, he said:

"If we capture Bizerte and Tunis, it will be one of the greatest accomplishments of the war. Then new strategy will have to be worked out which might be bombing raids over Italy and elsewhere. I see the gradual extension of the bombing operations wherever we can establish them."

Nash pointed out that the British and American air forces already have been bombing Genoa and Milan. The R. A. F. has now bombed Genoa many times, flying 1500 miles back and forth across the Alps from England to do it.

The New Zealand diplomat told reporters that the Pacific War Council had devoted a fair amount of time to other fronts. He said the Solomons situation was "as good as anything we have seen," but he predicted the Japs would come back.

Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, said President Roosevelt gave the council a resume of how several military operations were working together. Leighon McCarthy, the Canadian Minister, said the council had discussed the Japanese foothold in the Aleutian Islands, and he emphasized that this sector of the war was not being overlooked.

Harrow, England, Nov. 18 (HNS).—Prime Minister Churchill, most distinguished living "old boy" of Harrow School, today told the "teenage youngsters" that "success is attending our arms."

In an impromptu speech during a surprise visit to the old institution just outside London, the Prime Minister warned that "there are many dangers and deceptions still besetting us."

Like Mother, Like Son

CAN YOU TELL WHICH IS WHICH?—One of these is Vice Admiral William F. Halsey, victorious commander of the American fleet in the Solomons. The other is his mother, 83-year-old Mrs. William F. Halsey, sr., who still calls her fighting son, "Pudge." (Mrs. Halsey is at right—Ed.)

War Powers Bill Is Tabled

December 31, 1943, as the date when the proposed legislation would expire, unless Congress then agreed to continue it. The Administration had asked that the President's proposed new powers continue until the day after war ended, or until Congress revoked them.

Another amendment said to have received approval from the Government witnesses would prohibit any suspension of the present immigration quotas.

Representative Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina, chairman of the committee, told reporters a majority of members felt that the bill as written was broader than necessary, and that it might be difficult to get it through either the committee or Congress.

Cooper Named Chairman
Representative Cooper (Democrat) of Tennessee was named chairman of the subcommittee, and its members included Doughton, and Representatives Robertson (Democrat) of Virginia and Hill (Democrat) of Washington. Republican members were Reed of New York, Woodruff of Michigan, and Jenkins of Ohio.

Cooper declared that all the Federal witnesses had strongly indorsed the legislation, while Doughton added that it was the unanimous feeling of the committee that some legislation would be both necessary and desirable.

Besides Biddle, the committee heard Undersecretary of War Patterson, Undersecretary of the Navy Forrestal, Assistant Treasury Secretary Gaston, Assistant Secretary of State Long, Maritime Commission Chairman Land, and Tariff Commission Chairman Ryder.

Examples Cited
In testimony later made public, Attorney General Biddle cited several examples of how present laws have impeded the war effort. Civilian and military leaders of America's allies, brought to this country on planes of the Air Transport Command, have been delayed, he said, and the sometimes necessary secrecy of their missions had been endangered, by the requirement that all aliens coming to this country go through an immigration inspection.

Important Allied military officers have been held up for some minor omission in their papers. Foreign troop ships and those carrying war materials are similarly subject to immigration inspections, he said.

Allies Now on Top In Pacific—Cripps

By International News Service

London, Nov. 18.—Britain declared officially today that the balance of Pacific naval power has shifted to the Allies.

The great victory scored by the United States Navy in the Solomons "has done a great deal to redress the balance of naval power in the Pacific," Sir Stafford Cripps, who is leader of Commons, told the House.

He made it clear he was speaking in behalf of the Churchill government when—amid cheers that rang through the House—he paid glowing tribute to the "important victory." This triumph, he said, was "marked by the most gallant fighting." He added:

"We would like to offer our sincere congratulations to the United States Navy."

As one result of the smashing rout inflicted upon the Japanese armada in the southeast Solomons, Sir Stafford said "it is probable that the Japanese will not be able to hold Buna," the strategic eastern New Guinea base on which Gen. Douglas MacArthur's American-Australian troops are now closing in.

In London, generally, the American naval victory—termed the greatest since Jutland—was regarded as all the more convincing and thorough by virtue of the Japanese admission of part of their losses.

powers to Laval "to enable him to speedily deal at any hour and in all places with the difficulties through which France is passing," and he declared he appreciated "the patriotism and foresight of Laval in all circumstances."

Still using the royal "We" in referring to himself, Pétain said: "We, Marshal of France and Chief of State by virtue of the constitutional law of July 10, 1940, decree that the head of government (Laval), outside of constitutional laws, has the power on his simple signature alone to make laws and issue decrees."

A Majority Vote

The marshal's new decree said that "in case of permanent incapacity (Pétain's) the cabinet shall within a month appoint a Chief of State by a majority vote."

"At the same time," the decree continued, "it shall define and fix the respective powers and attributions of the Chief of State and Head of Government whose functions shall be separate."

Immediate repercussions from these developments were seen tonight in a Vichy report that Vice Admiral G. A. J. P. Auphan, Secretary for the Navy, and Robert Gibrat, Secretary of State for Communications, had resigned their cabinet posts.

Admiral Jean Marie Abrial, former governor-general of Algeria, replaced Admiral Auphan, and Jean Bichelonne combined Gibrat's post with his present one of Secretary of State for Industrial Production, incidentally, geared to Germany's war needs.

These men doubtless resigned in protest against Laval's new powers. They probably knew they were going to be fired anyway, since Admiral Auphan is known to be a supporter of Darlan.

Auphan undoubtedly is slated to use what prestige he retains in Algeria for the benefit of the Axis. There also remains the question of the Toulon fleet. Darlan has asked it to go over to the Allied side; but it still rides at anchor within gunshot of surrounding Axis occupation armies.

Policy Is Unclear

Just what form the pro-Axis policy of Laval will assume remained unclear tonight. There have been reliable reports that Laval was negotiating a peace with the Axis to replace the armistice, perhaps as a forerunner of trying to place France formally at war with the Allies.

These reported terms would give Germany Alsace and Lorraine, provinces they already have taken over, and would place the Vichy

Appropriation Held Likely For Puerto Rico Food Probe

Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois, last night said he believed the Senate Audit and Control Committee would report favorably on a resolution calling for expenditure of Senate funds for an investigation of critical food shortages in Puerto Rico.

Lucas, committee chairman, added that he expected the committee would formally take action either today or tomorrow.

If the investigation, already approved by the Senate Territories and Insular Affairs Committee, is supplied with funds—probably $50,000—it will be contrary to the emphatic opposition of Interior Secretary Ickes.

Ickes' opposition, disclosed by Lucas who read into the record of a hearing of his committee yesterday a letter from the Secretary of State, dated November 18, brought from Senator Chavez (Democrat) of New Mexico, sponsor of the investigation resolution, the charge that the cabinet officer:

"Is against this investigation for fear that some one will investigate some one he doesn't want investigated."

In the letter, Ickes declared that he was "afraid" the inquiry "would serve principally as a sounding board for a few people who hope to make political capital out of the effects of the war on Puerto Rican economy."

Ickes held that a shortage of shipping, caused by the submarine menace in the Caribbean and diversion of vessels to war fronts, was at the root of the island's economic difficulties.

War Shipping Administrator Emory Land and Deputy Administrator Lewis W. Douglas agreed in the letters read by Lucas that monthly shipments to Puerto Rico recently have averaged more than 12,000 long tons above the minimum needed for basic and secondary foods as stated in a report from Gov. Rexford G. Tugwell.

Philadelphia, Nov. 18 (AP).—A 9-month-old baby with an open safety pin in her lower esophagus was flown approximately 1800 miles from her West Indies home to Temple University's Chevalier Jackson Bronchoscopic Clinic today.

Physicians said the child, Lorraine Henriquez of St. Andrews, Jamaica, would be kept under observation for a day or two before an operation would be attempted. She swallowed the pin three days ago while playing on the floor.

She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Leah Henriquez.

Official Admits $73,000 Profit On War Jobs

A steel company official was accused yesterday before a Senate investigating committee of setting up a "bleeding corporation" that made more than $73,000 profit on a $23,000 investment in the handling of war contracts.

The statement by Chairman Truman (Democrat) of Missouri of the committee investigating war spending brought from the witness, Kenneth T. Burr, an announcement that he was willing to return $33,000 to the Maritime Commission.

Burr, general manager of the Bancroft Rolling Mills of South Portland, Me., said he established a private firm, the Materials Handling Co., at the suggestion of the Todd-Bath Shipyards, to haul steel for merchant shipbuilding in the area. He put up $30,000 cash and borrowed $20,000 to get the contract started.

Burr testified, under the questioning of committee members that he charged up more than $73,000 profit on contracts with the British government and the Maritime Commission, and also received a $10,000

mittie to report the legislation was taken with the aid of proxies and while a physical committee quorum was not present.

Senator Chandler overruled the first point of order, Senator Connally appealed the ruling of the chair. The Senate agreed 37 to 23 to Senator Barkley's motion to table the appeal.

Before the vote was taken, however, Senator Connally gave new evidence of the bitterness which the poll-tax issue has generated in the Senate—a bitterness that salary in addition to the $30,000 the Bancroft firm pays him annually.

Of the total, $33,000 profit was made by hiring trucks at $3 an hour to haul steel and charging $3.50, Burr said.

"That's a kind of a bleeding corporation," Truman asserted. "This money was exacted from the United States Government."

Asked by committee counsel if he proposed to return the $33,000, Burr said:

"I certainly do."

Burr said he did not originally "want to get into the steel-trucking business" but that he had been urged to handle it by Todd-Bath officials.

is certain to be carried over into the new Congress and to diminish the authority of the leadership.

The outburst engulfed Senator Norris. He was reminded of "majority rule in Nebraska," a reference to the Nebraska election defeat. Connally later volunteered to withdraw a reflection on Norris' statesmanship, but added:

"I've always admired the Senator, but I do not appreciate it that in the closing days of his Senatorship he should stab those of us who have been fighting with him and struggling with him through the years for liberal legislation."

Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia strongly hinted in the Senate that foes of the bill probably will debate the constitutional question raised by Doxey for a relatively brief period and then permit the bill formally to come before the Senate, confident that they have enough votes to defeat cloture.

'I Expected It,' Says Father of Craw's Death in African War

By the Associated Press.
Traverse City, Mich., Nov. 18.—When a newspaperman called today on Mark Craw to inform him that his son, Air Force Col. Demas T. (Nick) Craw of Washington, had been killed at Morocco in what his superiors called "superlative heroism," the elder Craw said quietly:

"I know why you're here. Nick's dead. I expected it because he always picked up where the other boys left off."

Craw said the last word he heard from his soldier son—who died in a burst of machine-gun fire after volunteering to go ashore to convince the French commander at Morocco to surrender—was five weeks ago when the colonel telephoned from Washington to say:

"Dad, I am going away for a long time and you won't be hearing from me. I can't tell you where I'm going."

"Nick," said the father, "can you interpret some rough code?"

"Try me."

"I am going duck hunting tomorrow, Nick," the father said, "and every duck I shoot will be a Jap. How about you?"

"Mine won't," said the son. Recalled the elder Craw: "I knew then he was going East, not West."

Fitting Epitome, Craw's Wife Says

Special Dispatch to The Post
Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 18.—Army life was what he always wanted and that he should have ended his military career in the service of his country was a fitting epitome to his active life, declared Mrs. Mary Victoria Craw, wife of Col. Demas T. Craw, interviewed tonight at her home, Dunlora, where she had resided for the last years with her son, Nicholas Weston Craw, now 6.

Mrs. Craw, though not informed of her husband's death until noon today, exhibited spartan fortitude as she reviewed some of the highlights of the 25 years her husband had spent in the Army.

U-Boat Hits Four R. A. F. Planes Before Sinking

U. S. Twelfth Air Force Headquarters, Algeria, Nov. 15 (Delayed).—British-manned American-made planes figured in a strange submarine-airplane battle in the Mediterranean in which a U-boat was knocked out after she had damaged four attacking bombers, it was disclosed today.

A group of five Hudson bombers of the R. A. F. coastal command, led by Wing Commander Dennis Spotswood of Teddington, England, located the German submersible and Spotswood's plane swept in to loose depth charges within 10 feet of the conning tower.

Unable or unwilling to submerge, the German crewmen fired on Spotswood's plane, smashing one of the gasoline tanks and hit a total of four out of the five bombers as they swept over in attack, although none of the plane crewmen was hurt.

An Allied destroyer hurried up to join the scrap just as the U-boat sank. American-manned Spitfires arrived in time to help spot the German crew struggling in the water and direct the destroyer to them to save them from drowning. The German captain and crew finally all were captured and turned over to an American armored patrol ashore.

Japanese Admit Heavy Loss
In Solomons Sea Battle

and inflicted heavy damages on the airfield and its facilities.

"On November 14 while escorting our transport fleet in the face of a fierce counterattack by enemy aircraft, imperial naval forces encountered an enemy reinforcement fleet with two battleships and more than four large-sized cruisers at a point northwest of the island and at night, after a heated encounter, destroyed the major part of the enemy auxiliary units and heavily damaged two large battleships, routing the enemy fleet in a southern direction."

This was Japan's response to the official United States report that the enemy fleet itself was forced back from the lower Solomons in such disorder that some of its units exchanged gunfire.

But the imperial headquarters summed up the Japanese losses and damage as follows:

"One battleship (presumably of the Kongo class), sunk; one battleship damaged; one cruiser sunk; three destroyers sunk and seven transports damaged. Thirty-two planes dived into the enemy and nine (other) planes failed to return."

Here is the Japanese score, not confirmed by any Allied source, of United States losses in the same fight:

"...sunk—eight cruisers, including three new type. Five of these cruisers were instantly sunk. Four or five destroyers. One transport."

"Heavily damaged—Two battleships, three cruisers, three or four destroyers and three transports.

"...Losses of enemy aircraft—63 planes shot down and more than 10 (others) destroyed."

American Claims

The Japanese communique covered the action of November 12-14 and contrasted with the following United States Navy report of Japanese losses:

Sunk—One battleship, three heavy cruisers, two light cruisers, five destroyers and eight transports.

Damaged—One battleship and six destroyers.

Destroyed—Four cargo transports.

In that same period, the United States acknowledged the loss of two light cruisers and six destroyers.

For the Japanese home front, the Tokyo radio had broadcast a claim that the 35,000-ton U. S. battleship North Carolina and the 33,400-ton Idaho "fled after receiving terrific damage at the hands of the Japanese navy."

There has been no Allied confirmation that those vessels even were in the Southwest Pacific and the report on the Idaho clearly showed that the Axis propaganda had slipped up.

The Paris radio, German controlled, claimed last October 22 that survivors of the Idaho had been landed at Gibraltar. The Italians claimed on October 6 that the Idaho was sunk off West Africa. There has been no confirmation of any kind of these claims.

Like Washington
Griffin Couldn't Lie,
Witness Says

New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—A collateral descendant of the Nation's first President today described William Griffin, charged with conspiracy to undermine the morale of the armed forces, as "a man like George Washington—he couldn't tell a lie."

The witness, the Rev. Richard Blackburn Washington, pastor of the Roman Catholic Shrine of the Sacred Heart, Hot Springs, Va., testified for the publisher of the New York Inquirer at proceedings in which the Government seeks to remove Griffin to Washington for trial on the conspiracy indictment. The priest identified himself as a great-grandnephew of Washington and said his father was born at Mount Vernon, Va., Washington's ancestral home. He said he had known Griffin for about 15 years and that "his reputation is 100 per cent as to citizenship and the highest for patriotism."

United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter, before whom the removal proceedings have been held, gave both sides two weeks to file briefs.

Lawyers Decide Owner Wins Eviction Suit Compromise

Mrs. Laura M. Blake of 1362 Shepherd Street Northwest must find a new home by June 15 under a Municipal Court order, notwithstanding the District Rent Control Law.

With the jury deadlocked after an hour's deliberation, opposing attorneys agreed in court late Tuesday to settle the eviction suit brought by her landlord, Charles Christakos of 1306 Shepherd Street Northwest by such a stipulation.

By the compromise, Christakos wins the case, in effect, it was heard by Chief Judge George F. Barse.

Christakos brought the suit under a provision of the Emergency Rent Control Act, which permits a landlord to have a tenant evicted if he can show that he intends to use the vacated apartment for himself and his family.

Attorneys Edward A. Aaronson and Vincent Toomey, representing Christakos, argued before the court that Christakos had bought the house July 29, after Mrs. Blake had moved in, and needed it for his own use. Christakos testified his present home was too small for his family and that he had been forced to have his 9-year-old daughter stay with his grandparents.

Mrs. Blake, who sublets part of the house to nine Government workers, was represented during the trial by Attorney Herman Miller.

Cramer Convicted Of Treason as Saboteur Aide

New York, Nov. 18 (AP)—Anthony Cramer, 42-year-old mechanic accused of aiding two of the eight Nazi saboteurs landed by submarine on the Atlantic Coast last June, was convicted of treason by a 12-man jury in Federal Court tonight.

The jury deliberated slightly more than two hours on the case of Cramer, who was charged with having met and extended "aid and comfort" to Werner Thiel and Edward J. Kerling after they were landed by a German submarine on the Florida coast. Both spies were executed in Washington.

Cramer, who will be sentenced next Wednesday by Judge Henry "T. Goddard, faces a penalty ranging from five years prison sentence and $10,000 fine to death.

His treason trial was the third to end in conviction in 148 years. First after such a long period was that of Max Stephan of Detroit last August 6. Six relatives and friends of the executed saboteur, Herbert Haupt, were convicted in the second treason trial last Saturday in Chicago.

Urges Young Clerics To Take Position at Baptist Convention

By Robert Tase Allan
Post Church Editor

A plea for younger clergymen to consider the opportunities of chaplaincy service in the Armed Forces was made yesterday by Dr. S. Arthur Devan in praising the Government's recognition of religion's importance in the lives of servicemen.

Dr. Devan told delegates at the sixty-fifth annual meeting of the D. C. Baptist Convention of Churches that there was now one chaplain for every 1000 or 1200 men in the Armed Forces and that several chaplains already had laid down their lives at the battlefronts.

Dr. Devan, director of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, quoted Gen. George Marshall as once saying:

"I do not believe any army in the history of the world has ever been created with as much care for the moral and spiritual guidance of its soldiers as has this great emergency Army of the Western Hemisphere."

He also quoted a chaplain stationed in New Guinea as declaring: "After this war no soldier can say truthfully that the church failed me when I was in the Army. The church is meeting its moral and spiritual obligations."

The convention at business sessions, reelected George B. Fraser of Chevy Chase Baptist Church, for the third term as president. Also reelected were Mr. Chandler Stith, pastor of Brookland Baptist Church, vice president; William N. Janson, Second Baptist Church, secretary; Edward N. Janson, assistant secretary, and Maj. Elgin Smith, treasurer.

The convention, covering Baptist churches in Maryland and the District, went on record as pledging all-out support to the United Nations war effort.

Another resolution, copies of which will be sent to the District school board, expressed hope that "nothing would be done in revising the textbooks regarding use of alcohol that would in any way lend encouragement to the increased consumption of strong drink."

The meeting closed last night at National Baptist Memorial Church with a song program by residents of the Baptist Home for Children and an address by the Rev. Everett Gill, representing the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board.

Petworth Baptist Church, Seventh and Randolph Streets Northwest, was selected as the place for the annual Baptist meeting in November, 1943. The Rev. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Cal-

WILL THE NAZIS SOON TRY FOR PEACE?

The American Mercury

Hitler always fights on two fronts—and often the diplomatic or political is more important than the military. This summer he prepared plans for a peace drive that may soon be launched. His diplomats have already tried to make the war for it through United Nations councils in neutral countries. Does he think the end is in sight, or is this just one of his steps towards final victory? Look behind the scenes with Hans Hahn, international journalist and author of "Mystery of Hitler's Peace Drive" in this month's MERCURY.

War Sidelights Eisenhower Threw Feint At Norway

Lieut. Col. McKelvy 13 Others Get Award From Adm. Halsey

London, Nov. 18 (AP).—The Daily Mirror said today the Allied North African Commander, Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, laid a smoke screen for that campaign by sending his aide to buy Arctic equipment two weeks before he left for Africa.

Word got around, the newspaper said, that an invasion of Norway was impending, and several news-men acting on "an inside tip," purchased heavy clothing.

New Spitfire in Action

London, Nov. 18 (AP).—A new, improved Vickers-Supermarine Spitfire fighter plane, with a bigger engine and four-bladed propeller, now is in operational use, the air ministry disclosed today.

Speed and horsepower of the new fighter are still military secrets, but it is powered with the Rolls Royce-Merlin "61" engine instead of the Merlin "43" or "46."

Its lines are almost identical with previous Spitfires except that it has a longer nose to accommodate the bigger engine.

The submarine sheds of La Pallice and Loriet were raided at a cost of one bomber.

Bernard Predicts Record Capacity For Production

The United States will have the greatest productive capacity that history has ever known after this war, Donald M. Bernard, advertising director of The Washington Post, told the Advertising Club of Washington yesterday.

"We're having full employment and high wages now and the American people will never stand for another period of unemployment and low wages," he said at the club's luncheon in the Raleigh Hotel.

Bernard said the war's developments in production point to a greater need of advertising after the war.

Our main postwar domestic problem," he asserted, "is not going to be can we produce, but rather can we sell and distribute the goods that our factories will be capable of producing."

Mrs. Meyer to Speak At Defense Council

Dairy Products Face Milk Content Cut

fat content of ice cream and pumping more air into the confection. The present "dairy" crisis has resulted from the greatly increased demands for dairy products for civilians resulting from the prevailing wartime prosperity combined with the huge new demands created by the African campaign and other military ventures, it was said.

The American decision to feed northern Africa is reported to have forced an alteration in basic plans for allocating the country's dairy supply.

Biggest pinch, however, has developed in war centers where civilian population has increased greatly in the past year. In the District of Columbia, a Department of Agriculture official said, milk consumption during June, July and August was 30 per cent above the level in the same months last year. During the last eight to 10 months, Washington consumption has been 15 per cent above last year.

To meet this pinch, the District has been importing about 4.5 million pounds of milk a month from other areas to reach our present record consumption of about 31 million pounds of milk a month.

The District supply remains assured until such time as the other areas which are now exporting milk to the District feel the pinch. The situation is further complicated by the fact that demand is increasing at the time when dairy production normally drops due to seasonal factors.

A similar tight situation exists with respect to meat, and some officials are reported to believe

For our Armed Forces

—"to see that our armed forces get promptly and in abundance the tools they need for the job."—E. G. Grace

FIRST IN SHIPS AND HEAVY ORDNANCE

Backing up our armed forces with vital supplies, the 260,000 workers in Bethlehem Steel are making scores of new production records.

Ships to carry men and supplies are obviously the most urgent need, and Bethlehem is turning out ships on the largest scale ever reached by any single outfit in history—all ahead of schedule.

In heavy ordnance, too, Bethlehem is America's largest producer. Our furnace men and forge operators are turning steel into armor plate for battleships, gun forgings, projectiles, bombs, shells, armor plate. Bethlehem is also a front line producer of aircraft forgings, and of scores of additional steels for combat equipment.

An ever growing flood of steel is pouring out for the war job. In October, for example, Bethlehem output reached a new monthly high of 1,100,000 net tons of steel ingots.

To the Public: These production feats have been possible through public patience and patriotism. The willing self-denial of the public in giving up steel in every day items, such as refrigerators, means that all tonnage can be poured into the war.

How a war industry works, the story of War Production Committees, tales of the sea—the atmosphere of civilian America in wartime is pictured in the current issue of the Bethlehem Review.

Official U. S. Navy Photo.

Less than 5 months after the old aircraft carrier Lexington was lost in the Coral Sea battle, the new U.S.S. Lexington was launched at the Fore River, Mass. Yard of Bethlehem Steel Company... Hitting the water a year ahead of schedule, she is faster, more powerful than her predecessor... Bethlehem's Shipbuilding Division is carrying out the largest combined naval and merchant shipbuilding program ever undertaken by a private organization.

WAR PRODUCTION COMMITTEES—War Production Committees established at the request of Donald M. Nelson, Chairman of W. P. B., function throughout the units of the Bethlehem Steel organization. Outstanding men from management and employees meet regularly to study and recommend ideas to supercharge production.

MACHINING A SLIDE FOR A 16-IN. NAVAL GUN—Bethlehem Steel is America's largest producer of heavy ordnance, which includes forgings for big naval guns, projectiles, bombs, shells, armor plate. Bethlehem is also a front line producer of aircraft forgings, and of scores of additional steels for combat equipment.

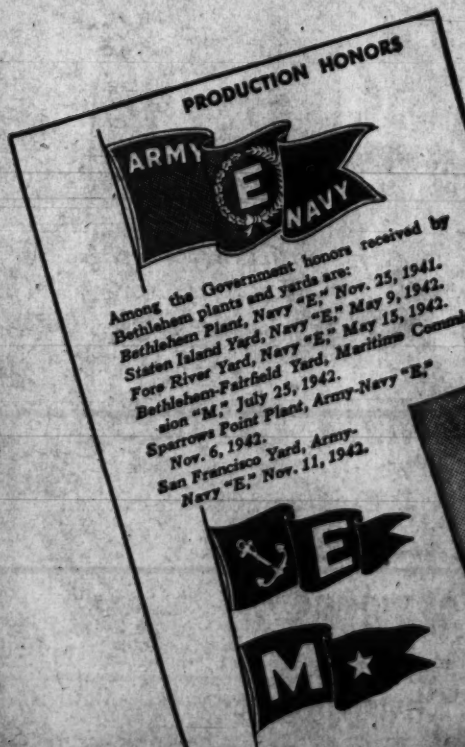

MAKING IT TOUGH FOR TOJO—Bethlehem workers torch-clean a slab of forged armor plate for use in the battle fleet.

JOHNSTOWN WORKERS SET UP A 21-DAY BOGEY—These workers are relining and enlarging a blast furnace in record time. Another record relining job was done at Sparrows Point in 26 days. Normal time for these two jobs would total 100 days. Saving of time produced 55,000 more tons of pig iron, enough to make the steel for 4 aircraft carriers.

LACKAWANNA FURNACE TOPS WORLD'S RECORD—October was a big pig iron month for Bethlehem. Lackawanna Plant for the second time in three months tapped a new world's record, this time for 46,190 tons. Superintendent and crew are shown here being congratulated by the plant general manager.

REMEMBER IT? Steel forged parts for the torpedoes that sank this Jap destroyer were made in a Bethlehem forge department.

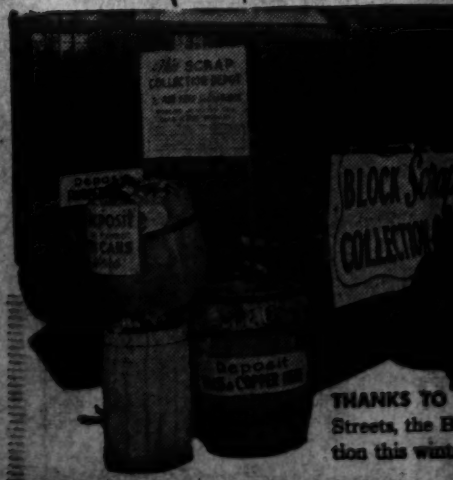

OUT TODAY!

Bethlehem Review is a bulletin of news for Bethlehem Steel employees and for any of the public who may be interested. Our regular press run on this issue would be 285,000 copies for our employees and our usual public list. Because of the wide interest in war industry an extra 100,000 run of this issue has been authorized. We shall be pleased to supply a copy to anyone with our compliments on request, as long as the extra edition lasts. Address Publications Division, Bethlehem Steel Company, Bethlehem, Pa.

JOHNSTOWN PLANT WINS BOND FLAG—$3,000,000 per month is being subscribed by Bethlehem Steel employees for War Bonds. Johnstown tops list of our major plants with 100% of workers giving 10% of earnings in bond purchases. A special Bond Division of the company gives its sole attention to handling the issuing of more than 100,000 War Bonds per month for workers.

THANKS TO THE AMERICAN PUBLIC AND THE PRESS—Scrap metal from the Main Streets, the Broadways, and the farms of America prevented a crisis in steel production this winter. Scrap continues to be needed—keep it rolling.

Refugees Seek To Save Caballero

Mexico City, Nov. 18 (P).—A move was under way here today to enlist the aid of President Roosevelt and the chief executives of all the other American republics to save the life of Francisco Largo Caballero, a former Premier of Republican Spain who has been reported to be a Spanish prisoner. Diego Martinez Barrio, last president of the Spanish Parliament, presided at a meeting of Spanish Republican refugees here last night, some 24 hours after the Berlin radio had reported the arrest in France of Largo Caballero and Santiago Casares Quiroga, another former Spanish Premier, and their delivery to the government of Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

General Patton thanked the Sultan of Morocco and said the American Army would not infringe on his authority. He expressed his gratitude to Gen. Auguste Nogues for his "full collaboration."

EVERY SERVICE MAN GOING TO THE PACIFIC SHOULD HAVE A COPY

CHARLES McKEW PARR "Over and Above Our Pacific"

So important to service men is Mr. Parr's book that the West Point Assembly writes, "It should be compulsory reading for the Army and Navy."

Shortly before a Jap bombing squadron over Pearl Harbor ignited the whole Pacific area, Charles McKew Parr recorded these vivid impressions of his airplane trip from New York to Hong Kong. His enthusiasm for people and strange places, sharp eyes for detail, wide background for history, and genius for distilling from casual conversation the essence of a whole people's political opinion and hopes, has rendered him an unusually capable observer.

He cannily foresaw the importance of Hawaii, Midway, Wake, Guam, and the Philippines in the light of coming events.

Besides sending this book to your son or friend in the service and (thousands have already enjoyed it), you yourself, being interested in our Pacific Islands, will want to read this timely and informative book.

Nelson Declares Production Is Only Part of the Story

The country which develops the methods and skills to service and thus put back into action its disabled airplanes, tanks and guns will win the final victory, Chairman Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board predicted yesterday.

Nelson told a Senate Military Affairs subcommittee that it was not solely a question of how many of "these intricate weapons" you can build but of how many you can keep in condition to throw against the enemy. Engines must be made easier to take out and repair, other parts more easily fixed and servicing reduced to the simplest and quickest possible methods, he declared.

The War Production Board chairman made these observations while endorsing a bill by Senator Harley M. Kilgore (Democrat) of West Virginia to set up an office of technological mobilization with authority to draft and allocate "technically trained personnel" and technical facilities for use in winning the war on both the home and battle fronts.

Nelson declared that the war program had reached its third phase and now is demanding complete utilization of both manpower and materials, synchronization, and quality even more than quantity.

Goods must be made in fewer man-hours, technological information must be disseminated among all manufacturers of a commodity and all production centers brought up to the best level through swapping of information.

"I can see the need all over the place for technological mobilization," Nelson declared.

Nelson said that in the first—prewar—phase of the program, tremendous defense production was launched. Then came Pearl Harbor to initiate the second phase and to precipitate what he described as "a feverish effort to build ships and more and more of everything."

The third phase, in progress for several months, Nelson asserted, requires "the organization of the war economy into an all out effort."

Nelson said that everything connected with the program proposed in the Kilgore bill depended upon administration. He said it could be "dangerous" if badly administered and very beneficial if the administration was proper.

Women Abroad

There seems little reason to restrict use of those women who choose to enlist in the Women's Reserve of the Navy to duty within this country. Surely they should be used where they are most needed. Granted that overseas duty may be more dangerous at present than duty within continental United States, that does not seem a justifiable argument for prohibiting women volunteers attached to one branch of the service from taking that risk. It is the same kind of discrimination which forbids wives of American diplomats and service officers on non-combat duty from accompanying and staying with their husbands abroad.

Aside from the objection to this policy as discrimination against women, it is a policy which is not consistently applied. American women have gone abroad to serve in many civilian and medical capacities and as Army auxiliaries. Moreover, the ban runs counter to the desire of the Navy Department to have enlisted women overseas. The stumbling block is Congress, and probably springs from some kind of spurious chivalry. Now a similar restriction on women reserves in the Coast Guard service seems about to go into effect. Surely where there is need for the help of adult American women who volunteer to give it, they should be permitted to go where they are wanted.

Federal Deferments

The President's order canceling the draft deferment of all Government employees except those "who by reason of unique experience are really irreplaceable" was long overdue. Some of the Federal agencies have consistently and wisely refused to seek deferment for employees. But there has nevertheless been palpable circumvention, on a very considerable scale, of selective service. Particular care ought to have been taken not to allow this to happen. For it has served to aggravate public resentment over the way in which Government agencies have handled other aspects of their own manpower problem. The presidential order will at least facilitate the prompt reclassification of those Federal workers who should be subject to the same process of selection that applies to nonessential workers in private industry.

There is, apparently, no reliable over-all estimate of the number of Government workers who now have a deferred status. Senator Tydings asserted last June that the total was in the neighborhood of 8000 persons, and his estimate has since been raised, on good authority, to 25,000. Assuming this to be no more than a very rough approximation, it is clear that the presidential order incidentally constitutes the merest beginning in the business of efficient utilization of manpower in the Federal agencies. Repeated charges, in Congress and outside of it, that the Government is the chief waster of labor have been too well substantiated to warrant further delay in reappraising Federal employment requirements and in seeking to place workers in jobs for which they are best qualified.

Clearing The Air

The statement issued by President Roosevelt regarding recent political developments in French North Africa should help clear the air of misconceptions and misunderstandings that have arisen as a result of arrangements made by General Eisenhower with Admiral Jean Francois Darlan. The Chief Executive has made it plain that he is 100 per cent behind General Eisenhower. The reason is that General Eisenhower's move has had the effect of saving American, British and French lives by helping to bring about a cessation of hostilities in Morocco and Algeria. Instead of having to fight Frenchmen so as to clinch our military hold on French North Africa, we and the British can now join hands with the French in fighting the Axis, the common enemy of us all.

Yet this does not mean that we have the slightest intention of having another Vichy regime permanently established in French North Africa. On the contrary, President Roosevelt categorically declares that he thoroughly understands and approves the feeling in the United States and Great Britain and among all the other United Nations "that in view of the history of the past two years, no permanent arrangement should be made with Admiral Darlan." Furthermore, this Government is "opposed to Frenchmen who support Hitler and the Axis." And, finally, "no one in our Army has any authority to discuss the future government of France and the French Empire."

In other words, the present arrangement in French North Africa is temporary. As such, and only as such, it must be supported on grounds of military necessity. Its effect, we are assured, will be to hasten the day when all Africa will be cleared of Axis troops. We are now in a position to demand the abolition of laws and decrees which were put into effect in Algeria and Morocco at the instance of the Nazi regime. And we can urge with better grace upon the present authorities the liberation of all political prisoners. All this unquestionably will be done. Accordingly, far from constituting, as some have argued, an "appeasement" policy, the efforts taken by General Eisenhower, in the light of his information, parrot of military statesmanship of the most realistic and fruitful kind.

Back To 1918

Perhaps one of the most dangerous illusions which we are apt to hug to ourselves is the one which says that history repeats itself. The trouble is that it is sometimes true. But if we rely too much on historical analogies, there is danger that we may substitute hope for action. The danger arises not so much in the case of Japan as in that of Germany. Perhaps it is as well that there is no precedent in Japanese history for prognosticating Japanese behavior in the hour of reverses. For, in the absence of such a guide, all planning must be based on a bitter-end and a long-drawn-out conflict. But in respect of Germany the vivid reminder of what happened a generation ago is already persuading some of us to think of the offensive in Africa as "the beginning of 1918."

To be sure, the parallel is striking. In mid-July of 1918 the Germans for the second time had reached and crossed the Marne and were nearer to Paris than ever before. Then they fell into retreat. Why? There can be no depreciation of Allied arms on the Western Front in saying that the German army was shaken to its foundations by the shock of events in the Near East. Lord Allenby's army, advancing from Egypt, had broken through the Turkish-German Front in Palestine. This was followed up by the "second front" established in the Balkans by the Allied army landed at Salonika. Turkey collapsed, and a few weeks later Bulgaria begged for a separate peace, after which revolution broke out in Austria and Germany. It was the beginning of an end which came so quickly that even the strategists were surprised.

Again an army based upon Egypt has broken through, this time in North Africa; and the push is being seconded from the west by Eisenhower's Army. If and when North Africa is cleared of the Axis, then there is bound to be a piercing of Europe from below as in 1918. Maybe it will be the Balkans again—the assumption that Italy will collapse as Turkey and Austria and Bulgaria did. What of Germany? Would the end follow quickly in Germany after such blows, as it did in 1918? The optimists insist that with such striking parallels from the last war, history will again repeat itself.

Perhaps the factor of most significance to the historically minded is Hitler's failure to reinforce Rommel. He seems to be leaving him to his fate. In similar fashion, Ludendorff left the Turks and the Bulgars and the Austrians in the same plight when the 1918 offensive began. But this historical analogy must not be pressed too far. We now know that Ludendorff was strapped for men and materiel, yet it is not so certain that Hitler is in the same fix. Just as justified as the assumption that Hitler can no longer spare reinforcements is the theory that he is saving his reserves for some final demarche. Indeed, the fact that he has not helped Rommel in some quarters regarded as an ominous, not a hopeful, sign.

Certainly, in no country is there a more clear-eyed view of the situation than in Britain. The bells, to be sure, are again sounding in that tight little fortress. But there can be few Britons who do not expect a mighty effort by Hitler in the not too distant future to wipe out his British adversary. We are so inured to the bombing of other peoples that German test-bombing of English villages with 2000-pounders gets scarcely any notice. But in Britain they know that Hitler still has in reserve a good deal of air power, including a big fleet of cargo planes. There was nothing like this last left in Ludendorff's Germany.

But, if this is a different Germany from yesterday, are the Germans any different? Possibly not, since the psychology of a nation is seemingly immutable. The Germans are an emotional people who thrive on success but are unstable in the absence of it. In the last war, Ludendorff, on August 8, 1918—three months before the armistice—asked the German government to start peace talks, not because the military situation was hopeless—which it was not—but because victory had become hopeless. With such a people a lively imagination will now feed on the fearsome memories of these pre-armistice days. Haushofer, Hitler's great mentor, noted this softness back of the surface of German hardness. He has been confirmed in his warnings by the fact that whereas the bombings of Britain hardened the British spirit, the return bombings have had precisely the opposite effect on the Germans. The fear of panic and revolt is doubtless the reason for the increase in the number of home guards in Germany.

Let us grant all this, however, and still warn that there may be a different play upon German psychology today. The Germans must know the depth and the dimensions of the hatred they have stirred up

If not, they are beginning to be reminded of it. Nazi spokesmen have now begun to tell the people of the revenge and retribution on the part of their enemies and of the occupied peoples which would be visited upon the Germans after defeat. The question of what is to become of the Germans if they throw down their arms and ask for peace must be asked pretty generally in present-day Germany. If there is no answer except revenge, surely the Germans are just as likely to fight to the end as the Japanese. Doubtless, the removal of these fears, as well as the promise of food and a release from Nazi thuggery, is the job of those in charge of our political warfare. What success attends these efforts only time can tell. The point is that in this as in other respects the situation is not altogether analogous to 1918. Such differences should be a warning against using history as a reed upon which to rely for our expectations. Better to think of the present as the end of the beginning rather than the beginning of the end.

Spoken English

Since the President's recent dig at Mr. Willkie's pronunciation, most of us are listening these days to what Mr. Willkie has to say with an ear half-attuned to how he says it. On Monday night he again took to the air. And it would seem that his delivery has enormously improved since his campaign speeches of 1940. Nowadays it is simple, direct and pleasantly modulated; the language fresh and colloquial. But the enunciation, though it has also improved, still shows his unhappy tendency to agglutinate his syllables. He still asks us, for example, as Ammurkins to recognize that the world is now innerdependant. But though Mr. Willkie will never be a Cicero or a Demosthenes, or a Bossuet, this one defect prevents him from being one of the most effective radio speakers of our times.

As to the word "reservoir," which started all the pother, why not find an English substitute? English is already cluttered up with far too many of these unassimilable French loan words. The military boys, with their "personnel," "materiel," "morale" and what not are, of course, the most prodigal borrowers. Worse still, they are trying to change words that have been naturalized for generations back to their original French forms—"pontoon" to ponton, for example. This sort of thing ends by reducing language to gibberish. We have a certain sympathy with the viewpoint of Mr. Wooley. "Morale," he said, "is a nasty French word and I want none of it."

In New Guinea

Australian and American troops personally directed by Gen. Douglas MacArthur are reported to have reached a point only 30 miles from the Japanese-held base at Buna. Thus the indications point to its capture. When that happens, the last Japanese toe hold on Papua will have been eliminated, and a long step forward will have been taken in the direction of clearing all of New Guinea of the enemy.

The present developments in New Guinea, important in themselves, are doubly so in the light of the smashing naval victory won by our fleet in the Solomons. For, with the western islands of that group secure in our hands, and New Guinea regained as an Allied base of operations, the way will have been paved for an ultimate assault first on Rabaul and later on the centers of Japanese naval power in the Caroline and Marianne Islands.

The first steps in that long-range program were taken when our Marines were landed on Guadalcanal last August. The redemption of New Guinea was begun with the destruction of Japanese landing parties at Milne Bay and, more recently, by the recapture of Kokoda and the drive on Buna. Much still remains to be done before the approaches to Australia can definitely be regarded as fully secure. But we are on our way.

Admiral Callaghan

There is very little that anyone can add to the tribute that President Roosevelt paid the other evening to the memory of Rear Admiral Daniel J. Callaghan, commander of the now glorious cruiser San Francisco, who died on her bridge in the great sea action off the Solomons. This was a loss which touched the President intimately, for Admiral Callaghan had been, as he said, a close personal friend and associate. Nevertheless, the President's opinion of this officer was fully shared by the service in general. Besides the respect of his colleagues, "Uncle Dan" Callaghan had the affection of all the enlisted men who ever served with him, and this fact was a sufficient testimony to his quality.

Admiral Callaghan was a native of the city for which his ship was named. Thus, he has given a new luster to a name long illustrious in many different ways. His glory and San Francisco will become part of the inheritance of American school children. And while every American must lament the loss to the Navy and the Nation of such a gallant and versatile officer, every American must also envy him so noble a death.

NOVEMBER DUSK

I shall go out to see this alone for who else seems to know that the sky is lovelier now than ever before?
It shines so soft, under the lifted clouds, so close to mist and wind, so close to pools that murmur on the wind—oh, I can hear, be sure I shall! I come to be mist-wrapped, but in, near-sky, with only November
here in the fluid, glooming-light!

Letters To The Editor

Cafe Au Lait

Coffee has been one of the most important, if not the most important, thing in my diet. In the mornings when I awaken I can hardly wait until I get my cup of coffee. Have had to cut down during the day because of its keeping me awake. But that first cup in the morning always had to start my day if it was to be started right. Since the rationing is to start I have been trying to learn how to get along with as little as possible. Have made a discovery that I think might be of some help to others. I have always liked cream in my coffee. So I started each morning putting a little more cream and a little less coffee in my cup. Am gradually cutting the coffee and adding more cream and now more milk until I am drinking milk far more with coffee. I find I sleep so much better and am going to be able to get along with very little coffee and hope to leave the coffee out altogether soon. Of course, I can still enjoy a good cup of coffee, but feel that I am learning to help in a small way, and if some one of our boys can have my coffee, feel sure that it is worth while. There is not anything that we can't do if we want to bad enough.

Double Parking Of Trucks

I noticed that traffic conditions are being helped by the Fourteenth Street and Maine Avenue Bridge and the Virginia Avenue underpass. That is good work and we need it.

I have wondered why the Traffic Bureau never seems to do anything about double parking by so many trucks. They stand indefinitely on crowded or clear streets, street cars coming, still they loiter. Some won't move an inch to help a guy out. If some private car stops to let a passenger out, it's just too bad if the cop catches him—he'd better hurry!

Then when the truck driver decides to stop at any convenient spot for himself, he does it abruptly. Why should he care if a whole line of cars is behind him, piled up, maybe jammed, and can't possibly extricate themselves because of oncoming traffic in the other direction? Not a menace to safety, tires, time lost, or upset nerves for the day's defense work—not at all! What about it, Traffic Bureau?

Would Destroy Initiative

"FDR's Planning Board Drafts New Bill of Rights" is the front page sensation of a New York tabloid. Unhappily, this plan which offers free governmental rationing, is by no means "new." History shows that it has been the dodge of demagogues. It is, for instance, as old as the decay of the Roman Empire, which sought to prolong its post-republic days by governmental bounties. Then it was "bread and the circus" the latter being the counterpart of boondoggling.

According to one's hashed plan—which the President must surely repudiate—the Government would supplant religious and charitable agencies; also the Red Cross, since the scheme embraces food, medicine, and care on a global basis. Now individual initiative is that personal virtue which made this country great. Let the Federal Government destroy this incentive and the doom of the Republic is sealed.

Express Bus System

I wish to offer a suggestion for a simple express or limited bus system for Washington. The plan is to have the longer routes operate as do four-track express subway systems in New York City; that is, with (1) local buses stopping at every stop, and (2) limited buses stopping only every 15 to 20 blocks until they reach the immediate downtown district. Free transfers between locals and limiteds would be made at these limited stops.

The major advantages of the plan:

1. It will be easily understood by public.
2. It will greatly speed up travel to outlying districts, thereby increasing convenience and reducing bus hours.
3. It will eliminate the existing system whereby residents living in outlying districts must use buses which make local stops for five to seven miles.

At the limited stops, sidewalk canopies or shelters could be erected to protect passengers waiting to transfer in bad weather.

The S-2, Georgia and Alaska, route serves as an excellent example. Local buses would operate the entire length of the route. Limited buses would stop only at Underwood and Sixteenth, Fourteenth and Colorado, Spring Road and Sixteenth, Park Road and Sixteenth, Columbia-Harvard and Sixteenth, U Street and Sixteenth, Sixteenth and K Streets, and then all stops to downtown terminal.

JOHN IGLAUER,
Washington, Nov. 13.

Editor's Note: Through an error of transcription, Mr. Iglauer's letter which appeared yesterday in The Post expressed a viewpoint entirely opposite to his own. We herewith reprint the letter in its original form.

Federal Education

There are many who handle education with glitzy fingers. Wouldn't it be awful if education from the kindergarten to the finished university graduate were made free to all by the Federal Government! This ginger finger handling should promptly be brought to a stop. It is far better to come right out flat-footed for a democratic free system. Any schoolboy knows that a broad base for taxation such as the Federal Government has could give free technical, professional, trade, and fine arts education to rural, town and urban districts alike.

Fine arts are necessary to keep up morale, professions should be open to all, and books, tuition and all costs paid by the Government. Right now is none too soon to make ready for postwar improvements in our progressive state. Technical and trade free training is absolutely essential if our superiority in world affairs is to be permanent and survive. So out with the glitzy ways and the setting aside of the professions, fine arts and technical callings for the rich, the elect, select and the chosen ones.

Women's Place In War

There is a lot of talk about the acute shortage of manpower in our war industry, but apparently no adequate measures have been taken to remedy this important situation. I am not a top man in industry or a labor leader, but I have a suggestion that can help to solve, at least partially, the serious problem of manpower distribution.

The question is whether General Hershey or Mr. McNutt is going to have the last word so far as the manpower control is concerned. However, I would like to point out that there is still an enormous resource of manpower, practically untouched. This may be found in our hotel and restaurant industry, to go into dangerous rooms and particularly in dining rooms and behind kitchen ranges, but also among bellboys and elevator operators, men who could do essential work in the assembly lines of many branches of the war industry. I can't give any accurate estimate, but many from this line of non-essential business could be taken to be trained to fill out the gap in branches where they could do more good for the war effort, and yet there is no evidence that any authority has given any consideration to this idea.

The question now is what about replacements for these vacancies. I believe women should replace on these jobs, jobs which are far better suited to womenfolk anyway. Now women are encouraged to go into dangerous new jobs in machine shops and factories. This should be done only as a last resort. Our fair sex is not yet prepared to exchange jobs in beauty parlors and offices for those in greasy machine shops and dirty factories. Of course, women can play an important part in the war effort by working where they fit in best. In that way we can assure a speedy and decisive victory and reestablish peace here and in the future.

JOHN MILLOR,
Washington, Nov. 16.

Older Men In The Army

Many men between 35 or 38 to 45 years of age called into military service did attain a certain degree of success in civil life, in some cases without benefit of a higher education. That means they have worked unusually hard. Those men are seriously concerned about their life after the war.

Their fears are justified because they know that no amount of medical attention, good food, and regular living will restore their feet and legs to their once youthful condition. And what must be their thoughts? These men who have been assigned to combat troops for six weeks of training realize that such rigorous training is quite apt to ruin their health. Why are these men being tortured? Why? Why? Why? Why are they not given work they can do?

I entered the Army gladly because I knew there must be very few experienced building maintenance superintendents, and I also knew the Army has taken over many buildings that require such supervision. And here I am in the infantry. Of course, I know that this is basic training, but to the older man it is pretty rough stuff. My own feet are classified as second degree flat. And the medical officers tell these men to "think nothing of it!" The men of this age are not all "gold bricks." They must have worked hard to have raised success however small.

The Post Impressionist

The Crazy Englishman

The first time I read "Travels with a Donkey" I remember that I looked up the Cevennes Mountains on the map of France and said, "Some time I should like to go there." But that was a good many years ago and afterwards the desire was forgotten until one spring I found myself in the south of France, not very far from Alais, where Stevenson had ended his journey.

Alais is described by the guide books as a "cheerful and prosperous town situated on a bend of the river Gardon." But then it was neither the situation of Alais or its prosperity that interested me, but the fact that one of the roads out of it led into the Cevennes.

It was, I recall, a white, winding road that crossed the river and then climbed up into the foothills. It was April, the time of year when roads beckon, and I had plenty of time on my hands. Why not then do a little vagabonding of my own and see the Cevennes?

Starting from Alais, I could drive across the mountains, following Stevenson's route exactly but in the reverse direction, and end my journey at Monastier in the Haute Loire, where Stevenson had begun his.

"It was not, however, until I reached Florac, that town 'with a castle, many quaint street corners, and a live fountain welling from a hill' that I encountered anyone who had known of Stevenson.

I had arrived in Florac late one evening, tired and drenched from having been caught in a rain on the crest of the mountains, and it was while drying my clothes in the kitchen that Madame Melquion, my landlady, expressed a desire to know how I, an American, had found my way to Florac.

"Have you ever heard," I asked her, "of a book called 'Travels with a Donkey'?"

My question brought a smile. "If it is because of Monsieur Stevenson that you have come, perhaps you would like to know it was at this hotel he stopped."

Then Madame Melquion went on to say that it was her husband's family who then kept the hotel and that it was Monsieur Melquion's father who had taken Stevenson to the cafe next door, where they had talked all afternoon about his queer journey.

"You will find it all in his book." Having thus been accepted by the family on more intimate terms than usually falls to the lot of the chance tourist, after that I often went into the kitchen to talk with Madame and Monsieur, and it was the next evening, I think, that we were joined by Monsieur Melquion's father, an old man then past 80.

It had been discussing the route of my future journey. I had intended, on leaving Florac, to follow the Tarn River as far as Pont de Montvert, then cross the Lozere Mountains to Le Bleyard. This would have conformed to Stevenson's route exactly, but every time I would find the snow still too deep to permit crossing the Lozere.

"In June, yes," said M. Melquion, "but not in April," and advised me to take instead the route by the Gorge of the Tarn and Meade, which was much more picturesque, but had been missed by Stevenson because so little was known of it in his day.

"Stevenson"—the name seemed to recall something to the old father—"an Englishman. Yes, I remember him. He came into Florac one afternoon driving a little donkey no bigger than a dog, loaded with his sleeping sack and his luggage. Everybody was curious to see how the sleeping sack worked, so Monsieur Stevenson must undo his pack and get out his bag. He spent half an hour, maybe, explaining about his sheepskin lining and his pillow and how he slept on the ground, nothing at all over his head but the stars. Mon Dieu! We thought a man was crazy to sleep like that. That was what we called him, the crazy Englishman." Does he not say in his book it was with Melquion he spent the afternoon?

I nodded, thinking it was easier to agree to something so small an omission, and asked if he did not remember more.

"Not much. We went to the cafe, I remember, to look at a map. Monsieur Stevenson pointed out the way he had come and I told him how he could reach St. Germain by a path shorter than the road. The next day he left. Monsieur Stevenson loved solitude, you know."

Throughout the Cevennes Stevenson was known as an Englishman and my inquiries in search of an Englishman who had once passed that way were apt to end as at Chateaufort where, standing ankle deep in the mud and tracing with a stick the route of Stevenson's travels, I was advised that if I were searching for an Englishman in that village, I had better give it up.

I came almost to the same conclusion, so few were the traces after that either of Stevenson's brief, short steps or of Modestine's slow and measured ones. However, there were two other villages in which Stevenson was recalled. Unfortunately the accounts of these interviews are too long to be included here. Enough to say that in both of them the myth of the "crazy Englishman" had lived on.

"For why," said Madame Pin, who was my landlady at Monastier, "why should a man go leading a donkey through the mountains when he had nothing to sell?"

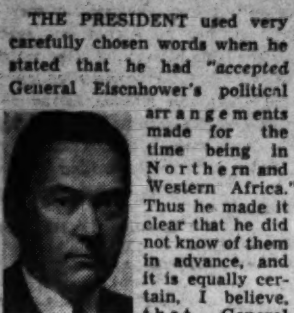

Why, indeed? To say that the man had wanted to write a book was simply no reason at all. Then I thought to ask Madame Pin if she had ever read "Travels with a Donkey," and she replied that she had not, regretting that she could not read. "Travels with a Donkey" was, however, well known in the Cevennes, almost as well known, said Madame Pin, as "Robinson Crusoe."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

America And France

THE PRESIDENT used very carefully chosen words when he stated that he had "accepted General Eisenhower's political arrangements for the time being in North Africa." Thus he made it clear that he did not know of them in advance, and it is equally certain, I believe, that General Eisenhower made the decision on the spot after he had discovered that the information he had received in advance from our political agents was on the crucial question incorrect.

The crucial question was this: The French commanders in Africa were undoubtedly favorable to us. They had no wish to fight us. As Frenchmen they are against the Axis. Yet as soldiers they were bound by their oath, and by that deep sense of ordered legality which nowhere in the world is more deeply engrained than it is in France. As soldiers they felt themselves bound to follow the orders of what they, and incidentally we too until our landing, had considered the constituted authority of France—namely the government of Marshal Petain. Therefore, they did not obey the injunctions of General Giraud and they did fight us until Admiral Darlan, who in their eyes possessed the legal authority, gave the order to cease firing. The decision which General Eisenhower made on the spot was based on this controlling fact, and in making the decision he showed himself to be a commander capable of judging swiftly and correctly the situation he encountered.

BY MEANS of General Eisenhower's arrangement with Admiral Darlan the constituted authority, as recognized in North Africa, was transferred from Vichy to Algiers.

Admiral Darlan became the temporary organ of constituted authority for the purpose of ordering resistance to cease, of ordering collaboration to begin, and of appointing General Giraud the commander of the French army, and of carrying out the instructions which the United States, as the occupying power, gives to him.

In this unplanned but wisely improvised fashion, there has come to an orderly end the power of Vichy in Africa.

WE HAVE now to make the passage to a political arrangement which can last until the whole of France has been liberated. Apparently it too will have to be improvised because it does not appear that the State Department has settled on the principle of, or worked out a program for, the government of liberated territory. The evidence that this is so is to be found in the President's announcement that he has requested the liberation of political prisoners and the abrogation of all laws and decrees inspired by Nazi governments or Nazi ideologies.

Obviously, this request will have the whole-hearted support of all patriots among the United Nations. But I hope it will not sound trivial to insist that righteous sentiments are not a sufficiently strong and lasting foundation for the restoration of freedom behind our liberating armies. In shaping our policy we must, I submit, grasp fully the implications of the controlling fact, which General Eisenhower's experience demonstrates, that the indispensable foundation is ordered legality.

THEREFORE, the liberating acts should not be based on specific requests by the President. That is a sign of a hasty though generous improvisation. The right way to accomplish his righteous purpose is to proclaim in North Africa the restoration of the constitution and the laws of the Third Republic. Then, when we talk about the freedom of the French, they will know exactly what we mean: we shall mean the freedom which they enjoyed under their own laws before the Third Republic was destroyed by the enemy and subverted by a conspiracy. This freedom includes not only the liberation of the prisoners and the abrogation of the Nuremberg laws but the whole system of French freedom under French law, including the right to revise by due process of law the constitution and the laws of France.

If we reflect on the matter we must see, I feel sure, that on no other foundation except upon the constitution and laws of the Third Republic can a wholesome relationship be established among Frenchmen, or by Frenchmen with their allies. We cannot make French laws. Nor can any Frenchmen we select or appoint make French laws. There is only one French constitution which is legitimate by the consent of the French nation and that is the constitution of the Third Republic. Therefore, it is upon this constitution that any provisional government in Africa or elsewhere must be founded. In all the French territory which is administered by General de Gaulle this principle has been inviolable, and the Third Republic lives on. The same foundation of legitimacy should at once be placed under General Giraud.

THESE considerations may seem tenuous to some but not to those who have learned to appreciate what 2000 years of Roman law and Christian order have done to shape the character of those Europeans who, like the French so preeminently, are the heirs of this great tradition.

Nor will they seem tenuous to those who have learned to realize that here in North Africa, here on the first soil liberated by our arms, we shall make the precedent by which all the peoples of Europe will judge us. We must, therefore, make a precedent which demonstrates not only that we can defeat our enemies, and not only that we repudiate the evil that our enemies do, but also that we are wise in the teachings of experience and know how to restore liberty upon the foundations of law and of an enduring order. Therefore, it is so important that we eschew all arbitrariness, even for righteousness sake, and prove at once that freedom for us means freedom under the legitimate constitution of the French state.

UPON that foundation it must then, clearly, be our policy to promote the union of all French leaders and of all French men and women who, in the President's words, do not "support Hitler and the Axis." Now that the Vichy regime is liquidated, the greatest obstacle to that union is, to put it frankly, an unreasoning prejudice against General de Gaulle on the part of certain of our officials. This prejudice must be wiped off the slate, and the old resentments and suspicions forgotten. For while General de Gaulle has made mistakes, as indeed who has not, he is one of the historic figures of our generation whom it is as stupid as it is mean not to welcome to our cause.

I do not wish to rehearse the sorry tale of our failure to do him justice, and to appreciate the great forces who acknowledge his leadership in France, and to work with the far-reaching organization of which he is the head. But I will say that if we had not been so stand-offish about him, we should have known more clearly and accurately than we do now what General Eisenhower would find when he got to Africa.

Spanish Neutrality

By Selden Menefee

Fact Or Fancy?

IT SEEMS to be the unanimous conclusion of various press services and unidentified "reliable European sources" that Generalissimo Francisco Franco has suddenly veered toward neutrality since the occupation of French North Africa. Yet the available evidence from European short- and medium-wave broadcasts in the first week of the campaign pointed in exactly the opposite direction.

The broadcasts, monitored by FCC and made available by OWI, show two things clearly: (1) The Axis is putting pressure on Spain, possibly to assure cooperation with any counter-attack which the Nazis may decide to make on the American forces by way of Spain and Spanish Morocco.

(2) Spanish domestic propaganda, which was scrupulously neutral in tone during the first three days of the occupation, swung back toward the Axis line when German troops took up their stations along the entire Pyrenees frontier.

Nazi Pressure Is Indirect. Nazi pressure on Spain is largely of an indirect sort. German broadcasts to other nations seem to be trying to swing United Nations opinion away from Franco. Berlin Transocean reported in English Morse code, for use in American and British papers, as early as November 8 that there was great tension in Spain and that the "war undoubtedly is closer now to Spain."

The Nazis told France the next day that "in view of the events in North Africa... and the fact that Northwest Africa is considered a Spanish sphere of interest, a certain anxiety is felt in Spain... public opinion in general feels that the Anglo-American guarantee... is an insufficient safeguard of Spanish national independence."

A whole barrage of items also appeared on the Axis radio, from Berlin to Tokyo, telling ominously of conferences between Franco and Spanish cabinet members and Portuguese, Vichy and Spanish Moroccan officials. Other items told of military preparations in Tangier and Spanish Morocco. Tokyo, for example, said that "Spanish troops in Morocco, as well as in the islands of the Atlantic, are making preparations for any emergency situation."

Nazi radio pressure directly on Spain has consisted largely of propaganda to turn the people against the United Nations. There are also implied promises that Spanish imperial ambitions to annex French Morocco and Algeria, which Berlin has publicized favorably, might best be realized by collaboration with the Nazis.

Spain's first radio reaction to the new offensive was to give favorable publicity to the American and British notes to Franco. For a time thereafter there was little comment on North Africa on the domestic radio. If Berlin may be believed for once, a demonstration against the British and Americans, scheduled by Blue Legionnaires and Falangists last Sunday, was actually called off by the Spanish government "so as not to endanger the impression of neutral unity."

Late on November 10, however, a Falangist broadcast from Valladolid on a domestic network said that "Never in the whole course of the war has there been such an extraordinary example of calm calculation... The Axis general staff as always has its plans scrupulously worked out, and at the right time Roosevelt will learn the answer of Europe's defenders."

The next day Barcelona broadcast to Spain a long attack on Russia, and San Sebastian radio cited German sources in justification of the Nazi movement into unoccupied France.

France Is Vulnerable

If the Nazis demand increased cooperation from Spain, there seems little probability that Franco will be able to resist, for several reasons:

1. The Spanish army is weak.
2. El Caudillo undoubtedly has commitments to aid the Nazis, dating back to the period of the "Civil War," which still bind him.
3. Despite the recent cabinet and Falangist shake-up, Spain is still divided politically. Some 300,000 Loyalists are reported to be still in prison, which is one indication of popular sentiment. The Catholic Church and strong elements among the monarchists and in the Army are known to oppose Axis collaboration. The purge which ousted Serrano Suñer as foreign minister took three strong Axis sympathizers

THE AMERICAN offensive in North Africa coupled with the rout of Rommel's forces by the British army in Egypt, promises to deflate Japan's morale even more profoundly than the recent failure of her land, sea and air drive to dislodge the hard-bitten American Marines from the Solomons. Whether Japan loses or regains control of the Solomons, the outcome of the fighting there cannot spell the difference between ultimate Axis victory or defeat. Allied success in the African campaign, however, can do just that, and the Tokyo militarists know it.

For General Tojo and his colleagues have realized all along that the final success of their plans of conquest is conditioned upon a victorious, or at least an unconquered, Germany. They were able to seize the Asiatic territories they coveted only because the German menace prevented Britain and America from concentrating their full might against Japan. They can now hold on to what they have won only so long as Germany remains undefeated, for once the European end of the Axis collapses, Japan's fate is sealed, too.

The sweeping Anglo-American triumph in North Africa thus deals a severe blow to the confident calculations of Japan's war lords. For the first time since Pearl Harbor, even the exuberant militarists and jingoists who placed blind faith in Germany's invincibility must be assailed with fears and doubt. Hitler has not conquered Russia. Now he finds himself menaced on his exposed southern flank. Can it be that the Axis hand-wagon, on which Japan was to ride to undisputed mastery of the East, has sprung an axle?

Mediterranean Threats

A great many unpleasant questions, indeed, must be haunting the minds not only of Tojo and his clique, but of all intelligent Japanese. Is the Allied offensive in North Africa the prelude to an Axis debacle in the Mediterranean? Once in control of the Mediterranean, Britain and America send increased reinforcements through Suez and the Red Sea to India, thus paving the way for a drive to recapture Burma? Must Japan, then, forestall them by launching an invasion herself into that vast subcontinent? Would the conquest of India, even if she could accomplish it, which is far from certain, avail her much should her Axis allies be defeated in Europe? And if Hitler loses the Mediterranean at the same time that his armies fail to reduce the Caucasus, how indeed can he escape defeat?

Let us not forget that the war morale of the Japanese nation has been nourished upon reiterated militarist assurances that the Germans are invincible; that Stalin will capitulate or, even if he holds out that Germany will break through the Caucasus and advance toward Iran and Iraq preparatory to joining hands with Japan in India; that the American Navy is too hard pressed in the Pacific to permit a large-scale Anglo-American sea-borne offensive against Germany in Europe, and that as long as Hitler remains master of the Mediterranean and a constant menace to the British Isles themselves, Japan on her side need fear no concerted Allied attack against herself or the vital areas she has conquered in southeastern Asia.

Now the false confidence created by these assurances has been rudely shaken. No longer can the militarists hold up before the Japanese public the myth of Nazi invincibility, for that myth, already undermined by Hitler's failure to subdue the British Isles and Russia, has now of high office, but put two of the same type in their places. Recent reports from Lisbon indicate that friction continues.

4. Spain's economic weakness is particularly marked in food and transportation. Some 80 foods are drastically rationed, including all staples except fruit and fish. The railroads are in very bad shape. These facts undoubtedly contribute to Franco's reluctance to abandon neutrality, and would cause Hitler to hesitate before embarking on a Spanish campaign; but they also make Spanish resistance to Nazi pressure the more improbable.

Franco's assurance to President Roosevelt that "Spain desires peace for herself" is probably sincere enough, and certainly welcome here. But it should not lead us to take Spain's neutrality for granted.

been finally exploded by the sudden transformation of Rommel's threat to Cairo and Suez into a rout of the Axis from the whole of North Africa by the might of Allied arms. Hitler may be excused for not anticipating the disastrous reversal of the famed Rommel's fortunes. But if he is the strategist he claims to be, he must have foreseen the possibility of an American move into North Africa, and the fact is that he was powerless to prevent it.

How much the Japanese press has been permitted to tell the public of the Nazi rout in Egypt and Libya and the American move into French North Africa is not known. Enough seems to have been reported, however, to let the public sense that things are going badly for Germany there as in Russia. The militarists are, of course, putting forth a bold front and trying to lull popular apprehension by belittling the importance of the African setback in the global war picture. Like a man shouting to give himself courage, General Tojo has just told a conference of prefectural governors that Japan's victories have paved the way for the final overthrow of Britain and America. His omission of Germany's defeats is significant.

Nor was Hitler's somewhat panicky verbal reaction to the Allied North African drive, coincident with the nineteenth anniversary of the Munich beer hall putsch of 1923, calculated to produce a reassuring effect in Japan. Strange, indeed, to hear the usually blustering Fuehrer tell his people, in effect: I shall never be a coward like the Kaiser, who fled to a foreign country when defeated Germany in the face; I shall stay and fight to the bitter end. If the essential parts of Hitler's speech were reported in Japan—and it is the customary rule to give full publicity to anything the Fuehrer says—even the pro-Axis section of the public cannot have failed to detect in it a startling admission that Hitler himself now sees victory slipping from his grasp.

The effect of all this upon Japanese morale cannot be overestimated. The Japanese know that their eggs are in the same basket with Hitler's, and if the Fuehrer is now acknowledging that Germany may be defeated, Japan, too, confronts catastrophe. It may yet prove the beginning of a general Japanese disillusionment which will undermine the effect of all the propaganda of military leadership and provide fertile ground for the development of our psychological warfare aimed at weakening Japan's will to fight.

To Washington and London the question of immediate interest is what Japan can or will do as a consequence of Hitler's defeat in North Africa and the Mediterranean. No doubt Hitler is employing both cajolery and intimidation to induce Japan to launch an attack against Russia in Siberia or against Britain and America in India, or even in both places at once. But it is not German appeals or threats which will lead Japan to act or determine the time, place and nature of her action. The Tokyo militarists have always looked out for themselves first and for Hitler second.

Fortunately for Hitler, however, General Tojo and his cohorts do not need to be told that an Axis debacle in Europe will doom Japan. Nor is it difficult for them to see that, with Germany's legions still stalled in Russia as another winter begins and with the Allies regaining control of the vital Mediterranean, the prospect of such a debacle is growing dangerously real. Out of consideration for her own skin, therefore, Japan may be forced to undertake some new aggression in the Pacific in an effort to redress the balance upset by the Allies' North African success and to deter Britain and America from sending sufficient men and materials to their new base to threaten a direct assault on the Axis-held continent from the south.

Encouraging Lack of Action

If Japan does not act, and as soon, it will be a heartening indication that she no longer feels strong enough to defend herself

The Plater De Luxe

("Mucho Gusto, whom in a decade of racing won over $102,000, most of it in $600 to $1000 events as a plater, has been retired.")—News Item.)

He wasn't very much to see—His name evoked few cheers; No prima donna type was he Down through his racing years.

He took his races as they came And knew no easy ways—So here's to Mucho Gusto as He finds some restful days!

II. A selling plater, that was all: The race fans knew him as The steady, honest kind of hoss That gives the best he has: Yet he had earned one hundred grand.

And quite a little more, A trooper to his last stretch run—A race horse to the core!

III. He never was a pampered pet Who had to have the breaks, Yet he had run with the elect And known his share of stakes.

No cautious owner picked his spots And quibbled over weights: Old Mucho Gusto did his stuff With high class ones—and skates.

IV. They shipped him here, they shipped him there For every sort of test—And he'd have gone to pieces if He'd ever had a rest: An "over-nighter" he became, As owners came and went... All looked alike to "Mucho" who Knew what the hard way meant.

V. He knew the cheers of the elite And knew the cheap tracks' roar; They all were just the same to him When he went to the wars: The Spa has seen him in his prime

But that was long ago... Yet Mucho Gusto kept his friends As few race horses do.

VI. Wherever "boss meets" were arranged They sent him to the post; From border line to border line And, yes, from coast to coast.

Regardless of the "competish"—(With legs off hot with pain) He'd battle through to hear the shout "It's Gus the Bus again!"

L'ENVOI. The Alsabs and the Whirlwinds, The Shutouts and their kind—They get the headlines and the fame

And that I do not mind; But Mucho Gusto gets my vote (A thing he doesn't need). I think of him when people talk "Improvement of the breed."

further without incurring grave risks. If she does, where will she strike? The favorable moment for a blow at Siberia seems already passed. Moreover, the North African development itself impels Japan to look in a different direction. The reopening of Suez may prestage the creation of an Anglo-American "third front" against the Japanese in Burma, and to fend off that danger the Japanese might feel obliged to go into India as a sort of defensive aggression.

This they have seemingly hoped to avoid, doubtless because of the hard lesson taught them by their misadventure in China, where they are sinking ever deeper into the mire. India may well prove a bigger and deeper mire for them if they risk it. At all events they will go into India, if they do, not by their own design or choice but because they feel compelled to. The initiative is passing to the United Nations, and that is the most significant development.

The Roosevelt-Churchill strategy of Hitler first, Japan second, is proving sound.

War's Third Stage

By Barnet Nover

"We Have A Gigantic Job To Do"

"THE BATTLE will not be ours," said Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, commander-in-chief of the British forces in the Middle East.

"until the enemy is lying senseless."

General Alexander was, of course, referring specifically to the fighting in Egypt and Libya. But his statement applies with equal force to every other theater of the war.

We and our Allies have won major victories in Egypt and French North Africa, in the Solomons and New Guinea. We have dealt the enemy heavy blows. But in no instance have these victories been truly decisive. In no instance has the enemy been knocked out.

We still have, as President Roosevelt reminds us, "a gigantic job to do." And, as he points out: "We have had an uphill fight and it will continue to be uphill all the way. There can be no coasting to victory."

WE ARE, at the present time, only in the third, or penultimate stage of the conflict that began on the continent of Asia in 1937, in Europe in 1939 and in the Pacific in 1941.

The first stage everywhere was marked by a long succession of fairly easy victories won by our enemies. The Japanese swept across North China in the months following July, 1937, captured Shanghai (though only after a fierce battle), spread out over the Yangtze Valley to a point beyond Ichang, seized Canton and made themselves masters of most of China's ports and railroads.

Germany conquered Poland, then Denmark and Norway, later Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Belgium and France and still later extended their control to the Aegean.

Then, after Pearl Harbor, Japan began spreading out into the Pacific and southeastern Asia. In a period of seven months, Wake, Guam, Hongkong, the Philippines, Malaya, the Dutch East Indies, Burma and a host of islands along the approaches to Australia were overrun.

THE SECOND stage everywhere was marked by purely defensive successes achieved by the enemies of Japan and Germany. Limitless distances and indomitable courage saved China from defeat in the years between 1939 and 1941.

The Battle of Britain put a period to Hitler's hope of an early victory.

On the Eastern Front the great defensive victory won by the Russians made it certain that sooner or later the Germans would again have to experience that most dreadful of all nightmares—a war on two fronts.

And in the Pacific the Battles of Coral Sea, Midway and now the Solomons have set the stage for continuous offensive action by our forces who hitherto have, for the most part, been on the defensive.

THE BALANCE of forces everywhere has thus distinctly swung in our favor. The roles are being reversed in the Pacific and in Europe and will ultimately be reversed on the continent of Asia.

We can take it for granted, however, that our enemies will do everything possible to avoid having to go on the defensive. To do so would mean their doom. So despite the very heavy losses suffered by their fleet in the latest Battle of the Solomons we can safely assume that the Japanese will not abandon the attempt to recapture Guadalcanal and will fight bitterly to retain their foothold on New Guinea. For if they are permanently evicted from both the Solomons and New Guinea they will not long be able to hold on to Rabaul whose loss, in turn, would threaten the southern approaches to their naval strongpoints in the Caroline and Marianas Islands.

Similarly, Hitler cannot afford to go permanently on the defensive either in Russia or in the Mediterranean, the "soft underside" of the Axis turtle. For him to do so would constitute a confession of failure written in letters large enough for even the most purblind of his followers to read.

What was true of the Kaiser's Germany is, despite Hitler's feverish denial, even more true of the Third Reich. The Kaiser's generals threw in the sponge soon after the August, 1918 offensive had gone aground. When that happened they realized the jig was up. For with American troops pouring into France in an ever increasing flood the odds against Germany were steadily lengthening. The Kaiser's generals had no stomach for a prolonged rearguard fight ending in a final defeat of the German armies on German soil. It is doubtful if Hitler's generals will, when the test comes, react any differently.

HITLER will certainly strike out if he can, where he can.

Unfortunately for him the directions in which he can strike are now limited. He has been held at arm's length in Russia, although it is significant that despite the coming of winter weather the German army is still battering away at Stalingrad, possibly because if Stalingrad holds out no other German offensive can safely be mounted.

The Germans might attack through Turkey in an effort to strike the British and the Russians from the rear. But that would mean adding Turkey to the list of Axis enemies. Or Hitler might send his forces into Spain in order to launch a frontal assault on Gibraltar. But Spain is an impoverished and war weary country.

A Nazi occupation of Spain, even if unresisted by General Franco, would add immeasurably to Hitler's already difficult supply problem and lengthen his already overextended lines.

Yet neither of these possibilities can altogether be discounted. And in the meantime Hitler is doing what he can to make possible a prolonged rear guard fight in Tunisia and Libya.

At any rate, the fourth and final stage of the war, the stage in which we shall be attacking the enemy on his home grounds, is still some distance off both in Europe and in Asia.

MacArthur's Forces Move on Jap-Held Buna

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Thursday), Nov. 19 (AP)—United States and Australian troops closed in on the Japanese New Guinea base of Buna today as heavy bombers streaked ahead to attack eight enemy destroyers "maneuvering off the north coast, apparently in support of the enemy ground forces," a communiqué announced.

"The advance of our ground forces on Buna continues with forward elements now closing in on their objective," the communiqué said. "Our medium units bombed enemy installations and positions. An enemy naval force of eight destroyers, divided into two groups is maneuvering off the north coast, apparently in support of the enemy ground forces. Our heavy bombers are endeavoring to engage them."

"Absence of any mention that loaded transports were on the scene left open the possibility that the destroyers might be prepared to evacuate the Japs at Buna, now being forced toward the sea."

Heavy Allied bombers were trying to get the destroyers within their bomb sights.

The Allied ground forces, under personal command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur who is in the field in New Guinea, were reported "closing in on their objective."

In the air, MacArthur's bombers fanned out for widespread operations. Some bombed enemy installations and positions at Buna in support of the ground troops.

Medium bombers and twin-engine fighters attacked the air-drome, nearby buildings and installations at Lae, on the north New Guinea coast above Buna. On the same coast, medium bombers raided the Salamaua air-drome.

At Gasmata, on the island of New Britain northwest of New Guinea, medium units bombed the air-drome runway. At Rabaul, also on New Britain, heavy bombers raided enemy air-dromes last night.

Northeast of Australia in Portuguese Timor, medium bombers started fires among buildings occupied by the Japanese at Baucau and attack planes conducted a strafing sweep over Macassar, a frequent Allied target recently.

Commercial Users of Tin Urged to Donate to Drive

Five thousand commercial users of tin cans received letters from the District Salvage Committee yesterday urging their registration in the tin can salvage plan, Secretary Horace Walker reported.

Cooperation from hotels, restaurants, hospitals, private schools and other large users of tinned goods was asked.

A plan has been adopted whereby the commercial cans will be collected at periodic intervals by bottling firms, who have donated their trucks and men. Nineteen firms have contributed the use of 81 trucks.

As a reward for their work the bottlers are to be given all of the No. 10 (1 gallon) cans they collect. In turn the cans will be sent to manufacturers to be made into bottle crowns.

The other cans are to be turned over to the Salvage Committee. All cans are to be prepared in the same manner—ends cut out, paper washed off and cans flattened.

This program leaves the District Refuse Department free to concentrate on the collection of tin cans from households.

Walker also announced the reception of a de luxe jalopy in the form of a 1930 Pierce Arrow, 1928 vintage, the gift of Fred Pelzman, 3004 Thirty-fifth Street Northwest, to the scrap pile.

The once-luxurious machine has plenty of salvageable metal in it, Walker said.

The scrap drive will be a continuous affair, Walker said, as scrap will accumulate periodically as articles are broken or discarded.

Jury to Deliberate Today In Bottled Sunshine Case

A District Court jury of 11 men and 1 woman was expected to start deliberations today in the case of "Count" Juan J. Tomadelli, 55, charged with a half-million dollar mail fraud in connection with promotion of his "bottled sunshine" invention.

Closing arguments were begun late yesterday and were to be concluded by noon today. Justice James M. Proctor then will instruct the jury.

If convicted on all five counts of the indictment, Tomadelli would face a possible maximum sentence of 25 years in prison or fines totaling $5000, or both.

Over 13 Years

In his final statement to the jurors, Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray outlined again the story of how Tomadelli allegedly swindled two New Jersey businessmen out of about $500,000 over a period of 13 years by falsely representing that his "wireless" light bulb was destined for success.

Murray said the "count" had told Ernest M. Swingle, 10-cent store manager of Elberon, N. J., and Massimo Antonioti, merchant of Union City, N. J., that a prominent friend was negotiating a $3,500,000 contract with the Government for manufacture of the bulbs.

Swingle told the court from the witness stand that he invested about $400,000 in the venture. This money, the Government claims, was put to personal use when Tomadelli was living at the Shoreham Hotel here.

Radcliffe Testifies

Among those testifying yesterday for the defense was Senator George L. Radcliffe (Democrat) of Maryland, who appeared as a character witness. Others were Mrs. W. H. Rapley, part owner of the National Theater, L. Gardner Moore, manager of the Shoreham Hotel, and Robert Ridgeway, of the War Industries Board.

Defense Attorney Vincent Martino contended in his closing statement that no fraud was involved in the case. Tomadelli, he said, was essentially an inventor, not a financier, and merely was seeking support of an invention which he was certain would succeed.

Additional arguments will be made this morning by United States Attorney Edward M. Curran and Defense Attorney William Gallagher.

Gas Rise Appeal Ruling Slated For Today

Justice Matthew F. McGuire of District Court is expected to rule today on whether he will hear the appeals of the OPA and 11 civic organizations from an order of the District Public Utilities Commission authorizing a $200,000 increase in the rates of the Washington Gas Light Co.

Another question that the jurist must decide is whether he will order the increased rate schedule to be stayed for the duration of the proceeding—if he first holds that the court has jurisdiction in the matter.

The appeals, filed yesterday, complained that the PUC order was "arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable" and asked the court to rescind it.

In initial arguments before the court, PUC Attorney Lloyd B. Harrison contended the court could not stay the new rates, since they had already gone into effect, as of September 1.

OPA's appeals and the supplementary complaints of the 11 civic organizations followed PUC's rejection Monday of a petition filed by Henderson for reopening of hearings on the rate order.

Organizations joining OPA in the court action were the Anacostia, Chillum Heights, Fort Davis, Hillcrest, Kenilworth, Randle Highlands, Sixteenth Street Heights and Trinidad Citizens' Associations, the Howard Park and Kingman Park Civic Associations and the Washington League of Women Shoppers.

Representing OPA at the hearing yesterday were Attorneys Harry R. Booth and W. Russell Gorman of the utilities division.

Lost Reporter Put to Work As a Fighter

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 18.—Capt. John D. Le Vien, a former Pathe films editor in New York and now a United States Army public relations officer, went to North Africa in charge of a group of correspondents, found himself leading combat troops in the thick of fighting and wound up capturing members of the Italian Armistice Commission.

Le Vien, in a letter received in London, said he became separated from his colleagues after landing, and was given command of 90 riflemen lost from their own units.

Unable to penetrate into the city in heavy street fighting, he was ordered to circle and move in from the rear. To get there he had to lead his men through a valley under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire from the surrounding hills.

"After wiping out the snipers and one machine-gun nest we were joined by two battalion commanders and 80 men each," Le Vien wrote. "Finally the whole group was surrounded by machine-gunners and it was impossible to move."

Meanwhile the cease firing order had been given, but word of it did not reach the American group in the valley or the machine-gunners with whom they were engaged. A colonel in command called for volunteers to go back and report to headquarters that night. Le Vien said he and another man slipped through the lines and reported.

Le Vien wrote that he next went to Algiers, where he was given a platoon, told to capture the Italian Armistice Commission, and fulfilled that mission.

Finally he established press headquarters in a hotel room formerly occupied by Germans.

"I am now sleeping in a Hun colonel's pajamas and wearing his underwear, as our baggage has not shown up yet," he wrote.

United States Plans Soon to Own Land Area Equal to New England

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun
The United States Government will own land equal in area to that of all the New England States before this war is over, the Justice Department estimated yesterday.

The Army and Navy, operating through the land division of the department, already have purchased approximately six million acres, and are in process of acquiring an equal amount.

Before the end of the war, the department predicted, the Government will own more than 30 million acres of land bought from private owners. It is being used for Army camps, naval bases, air fields, housing areas, bombing ranges, artillery fields and shipyard drydocks.

Total cost to the Government for land acquired to date and in process of acquisition will be about 284 million dollars.

Types of properties taken over range from the world's largest hotel (the Stephens in Chicago) to a honey bee farm in Mississippi, and a pier in New York harbor.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Today's text by courtesy of the United States Marine Corps: "Dear Mr. Povich, I was very glad to read your comments on the Army-Navy game in The Post the other morning," inscribes Midshipman Joe Gish. "I'd like to say a little more about Navy's offer to provide West Point with a cheering section due to the inability of the Army cadets to make the trip."

"If cheers can make that Army team beat us this year; why, I'm afraid we'll have to be beaten, (but, by Heaven, we won't be!) because we're going to do a good job of cheering for them, just as good a job as we can do."

"We've changed a lot of the fine cheers and songs that Navy men have been shouting and singing all over the world for years, just to get rid of that 'Beat Army!' refrain. That's O. K. We didn't mind doing that too much, if we can only straighten out a few of those unfortunate misled fools who've been blaming the few mistakes we've made so far in this war on West Point-Annapolis rivalry."

"This rivalry between us and West Point is hot, but only in athletics. That charge that men from Annapolis and West Point are professional rivals is a false, groundless one. Anybody who has even seen us on liberty together up at Philadelphia after an Army-Navy game, anybody who has even seen the Cadets down here before a game, or anybody who knows anything about it, knows we have the greatest respect and best wishes for Army."

"All the upper classmen here wear one West Point and one Naval Academy cuff link, and the same goes at West Point. No one rooted more strongly for an Army victory over Notre Dame than we did. In every way, the Cadets are the best opponents we have. They play tough, clean ball to the last whistle."

"Our two schools have the same training, discipline and standards. Everything we can find out about the Military Academy is fairly balanced against the Naval Academy. It boils down that we know that a man from West Point will play the same clean, good tough spirited battle anywhere that he plays now against us in football."

"I know I'm speaking for every member of the regiment of Midshipmen when I say I'd rather work under or with a man who was from West Point than from any other school in the world. To show you how well we can get along—when they come down here for a game we let them take charge of the regiment, and there's no difference at all between them and our own officers."

"We take pride in beating the Army, or being beaten by them, and we'll take pride in winning this war with a man from West Point. Jealous of them? Never. They have their job, and we ours, and while we're doing it, we'll be glad that there are West Point men to count on ashore."

"I would surely appreciate it if you could help some of those people in Washington come to a better understanding of this situation. Some of their ideas are very false and annoying to us. Sincerely yours, Joe Gish."

"Dear Mr. Povich," writes Corp. B. E. Marsh, United States Marine Corps, "I read with interest your story in which Redskin Coach Ray Flaherty discussed the possibilities of a Sammy Baugh-Don Hutson forward passing combination. There is no doubt Flaherty knows whereof he speaks. Sammy and Don wouldn't work—a clash of styles."

"What I want to gripe about is this: Coming from the Midwest, I am about fed up on that same old cry heard here, 'Baugh this, Baugh that, Baugh—' One is led to believe that the great Sam is the only passer in the league. Admitting his greatness, has it ever occurred to the fans—the followers of the Redskins, that there is a Cecil Isbell and a Hutson. Baugh, great as he is can in no way equal the Isbell-Hutson combination, given any passer he may choose."

"I saw the first Packer-Bear game this season. Isbell was really chucking that day. One-hand shoestring catches by Hutson. What pitching, and what catching! But there was a guy around by the name of Sid Luckman who is a pretty good pitcher in his own right, and the Packers couldn't win."

"Of course it isn't entirely the Redskins fans who are at fault. I believe they are intentionally held in ignorance by the Washington writers. You birds would do well to inform them that there are other passers in this league, who are pretty good, too."

"Dear Mr. Povich," says Miss Isabelle M. Parks of 2515 Thirteenth Street Northwest, our favorite correspondent. "I note from your column that although the West Point Cadets will be unable to attend the Army-Navy game at Annapolis, the 'Army Goat' will make the trip. Can you imagine that? It certainly will be an occasion when the 'Army Goat' meets the 'Navy Mule.' Why don't you give up? Sincerely, Isabelle M. Parks."

Navy Stresses Attack, Prepares for Army

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 17.—Navy pre-Army game football practice, virtually holding the spotlight at the United States Naval Academy this week, continued today with the accent on offense.

The sailor gridders reported on the field about 4 p. m. for a drill in offensive fundamentals and a bit of polishing in their ground-gaining plays. Defense will enter the picture the latter part of the week.

Practice likely will be held Saturday, athletic officials said, although some members of the coaching staff are expected to attend the Princeton-Army game at New York. All coaches customarily scout Army the game before the traditional service clash each year.

This fall, however, one or two coaches probably will remain at Annapolis to put the sailor squad through its paces.

The only other scheduled sports activities at the academy this week are a Pebe game Saturday with the University of Maryland Frosh, and a soccer contest tomorrow between the Pebees and the Sparrows Point High School.

Two Are Injured

With about nine days left to groom for the Army-Navy game here, the Middies were beset today with only two injuries. Tackle Fred Schnurr is suffering minor ailments, and Tackle Jack Gillooly also is out, at least temporarily. The latter's place is being taken by Guard Jack Gillierist.

Asked today if there were any secret practices on Navy's schedule between now and November 28, one Navy official said "we don't have any secrets. And therefore we can't have any secret practices."

"Some of our defensive tactics are kept pretty well-shrouded," he added, "but the Navy system still holds no dark mysteries."

Annapolis interest in the Army-Navy contest remained high today with an announcement that one local businessman had declared a holiday for his employees the afternoon of the battle, and was furnishing them with tickets to the event. He has 18 full and part-time employees.

The merchant, Rubin Labovitz, claimed most store employees were unable to get the time off to see an Army-Navy game.

"There may never be another such game here so it's a good opportunity for them to see it," he asserted.

Layden Sets Contest for December 27

All Profits to Go To Merchant Marine; 40,000 Expected for Pro League Classic

Philadelphia, Nov. 18.—The pro bowl football classic will be played this year in Philadelphia for the first time, with the entire proceeds going to the "unsung heroes" of the Merchant Marine.

Elmer Layden, commissioner of the National Football League, announced today that the game, bringing together the league champions, probably the Chicago Bears, and the league all-stars, has been scheduled for Shibe Park, Sunday, December 27. The game was played in Los Angeles until last year when it was shifted to New York because of the war.

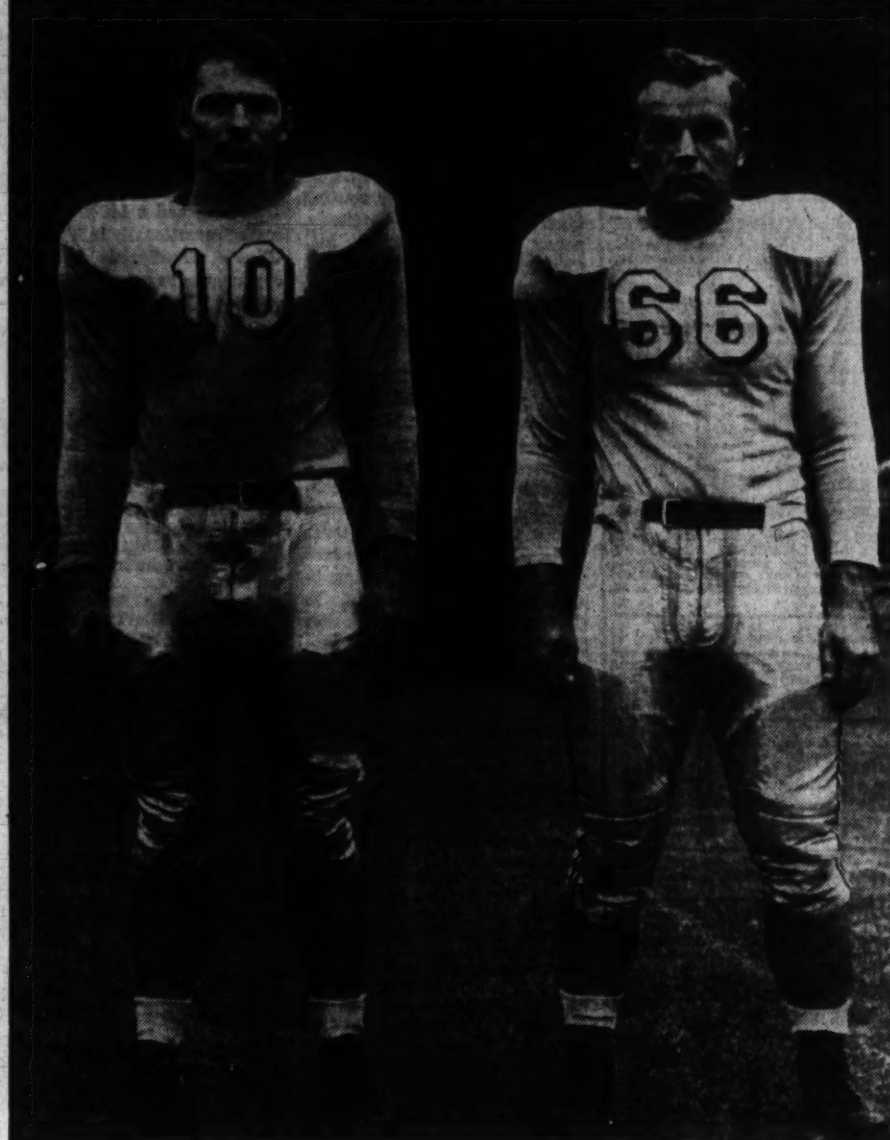

Admiral Emory S. Land, war shipping administrator, sponsor of the United Seamen's service in conjunction with the Maritime Commission, telegraphed Layden "my personal thanks to you and members of the National League for the tribute * * * to this vital service of the Merchant Marine."

A capacity crowd of nearly 40,000 is expected to watch the game. Tickets range from $1.65 to $5.50 with all seats reserved. Layden said no complimentary tickets, other than working press, will be issued and that the league will not receive a penny. In addition, he declared, the players will not be paid.

Layden also announced that the playoff for the league championship will be played on the grounds of the Eastern title winners on December 13. Neither Chicago nor Washington has clinched its crown, but the odds are that the Bears and Redskins will meet at Griffith Stadium.

The All-Star selections will be announced directly after this game.

Carolina's Cocaptains and Coleaders

G. W. Aims To Stop G. U. Aerial Game

Intra-City Clash Set Saturday At Park; Dornfeld Returns to Hoyas

George Washington University Coach Johnny Baker had the Colonials working in a pass defense yesterday, and no wonder. In the Georgetown game Saturday the Colonials will probably meet up with more passes than in any of their eight previous games this season.

Thus far George Washington's opponents have preferred to see their yardage on the ground, and have been fairly successful. Apparently the scouts have seen other clubs waltz through the Colonial defense through the line so they advocated the same.

G. W. has met up with some good passers but with the exception of the William and Mary game they came up with a fair defense. But they will have to be better Saturday when Hoyas Coach Jack Hagerty throws Joe Gorygydeak, Frank Dornfeld and two or three others including Lineman and Hines against the Buff.

Kaplan Tossed Few

In the season's opener with Western Maryland the Colonials allowed Kaplan to complete quite a few in his own territory but when the yardage meant something Kaplan had little success. Then in the Richmond game Spider Joe LaLuna was supposed to be a good passer but the Colonels bottled him up fairly well. They won both games.

Citadel, with few exceptions, stuck to the ground in beating G. W. and then in a sea of mud Fuman was forced to rely on its ground attack.

Bob Longacre, with late help from Jackie Freeman, used passes for William and Mary and for the only time this season G. W. lacked an adequate defense for aerials, but everything went wrong that day. Most of the Indian passes were of the lob variety.

Jesse Tunstall had just average passing luck against the Colonials for Kentucky but in G. W.'s best effort of the season, the Clemson game, they turned back the Tiger passing attack and Paul Weber intercepted a Butch Butler heave for a touchdown and the ball game. Completed 1 Pass

Last week the Wake Forest Deacons, with their usual display of power backs, attempted only three passes and completed one.

Thus G. W. Coach Johnny Baker has had only scattered opportunities to watch his club against expert passing but he probably knows just what they can do and wants to bring out the best for the fourteenth renewal of the intra-city series Saturday afternoon in Griffith Stadium.

George Washington's squad saw the Georgetown-North Carolina State game last Saturday and watched Gorygydeak pace the Hoyas to 185 yards gained through the air. With Dornfeld back for the first time since the Boston College game, Georgetown's passing should be even more dangerous, particularly due to the lack of fast men on the G. W. squad.

Baker now has the seven Colonial seniors ready for a farewell performance against Georgetown. Don Seibert's return to the center post will ready him for either a starting or first reserve spot along with Ellis Hall, John Konizewski, John Pollock, Al Romasco, Enrico Seno, and Myron Vleck.

Servicemen Invited To Table Tennis Play

8 Seniors Play Last Game For Maryland

Maryland, like all other schools in these uncertain war days, has no real idea how many football players it will lose before another campaign rolls around, but it does know that eight valuable seniors will be making their last grid appearance for the Old Line in the homecoming game with Washington and Lee at College Park Saturday afternoon.

Four of them are starters and the other four doubtless will see action during the fray. Included in the eight are George Jarmoska, guard; Luther Conrad, tackle, and Jack Gilmore, end, doubtless Maryland's three best linemen.

Even 'A' Gas Cards Threatened at Miami

Dade County Chief Issues Statement Warning Motorists on Use of Cars

Miami, Fla., Nov. 18.—Confusion over gasoline rationing arose today to plague Miami horse and dog track operators, already facing the severe headaches of trying to conduct race meetings in wartime.

Pending an official ruling, the tracks did not know whether their patrons would risk the loss of their "A" gas cards if they used their automobiles to drive to the races.

On the heels of an announcement that the weekly A card quota in Florida will be reduced to three gallons next Sunday, the Dade County (Miami) rationing chief, James A. Dixon, issued a statement saying "all pleasure driving simply is out."

"Motorists who use their cars to reach golf courses, ball games, race tracks or for pleasure of any sort will be risking the loss of their ration books."

Later, however, Dixon declared that he based his announcement on newspaper quotations of the Florida rationing head, and added that he would put no drastic regulation in effect until he gets official word to do so.

Since both Miami horse tracks are situated miles from town and lack adequate bus service, the first announcement came like a body blow.

"I don't see how any track can operate if that ban is strictly enforced," said Alex Baile, chairman of the State Racing Commission.

Sam McCormick, secretary-treasurer of Hialeah Park, declined immediate comment, but said that directors of the track previously had planned to go ahead in the face of difficulties "in the interest of the State and the public."

At Baltimore, H. L. Straus, president of Tropical Park, expressed surprise, saying he had conferred with ration officials only a week ago and had gathered that no crack-down on A book driving was contemplated.

Problems already confronting the tracks include such matters as lack of transportation and the fact that many of the hotels in the area have been taken over by the military, cutting down greatly on the number of tourists expected.

Nats' Catcher Al Evans Enlists In U. S. Navy

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 18.—Al Evans of Kenly, a catcher for the Washington Senators for the past three years, enlisted in the Navy here today as a chief specialist in athletics.

He was placed on the temporary inactive list but will be called on November 25.

Evans, 26, broke into major league baseball in 1940 after playing two years with Charlotte of the Piedmont League.

Bears Beat Hockey Lions In Big Period

By Anne Hagner Post Staff Writer

One 20-minute session during which Goalie Lloyd Storie guarded too much ice—and not in the right places—last night cost the Washington Lions their fourth consecutive defeat as the Hershey Bears went on a second-period scoring fest to nose out their hosts, 4 to 3 at Uline Arena.

Scoring for both teams was limited exclusively to that frame, but the path around Storie became too well-beaten for the game to be retrieved, even on a last-minute gamble with six Lions on the ice, without benefit of a net-minder.

Two hard-fought moments at the end of the game, in which the Lions tried desperately to tie Hershey, went all for naught, as the score-board never changed after a hectic second period.

With the score standing 3 to 1 in favor of Hershey, that well-coordinated trio of youthful Al Ritson, Leo Richard and Jimmy Jamieson took matters into their own hands for the second Lions' tally as Jamieson sneaked the puck past Ceryance's deft stick at 14:12.

Lions Close In

Winger John Fitzgerald, on long shots from Smith and Daley, rattled with fourth goal for the Bears with only a moment of the period left to play—and it ultimately turned out to be the marker that meant victory.

In the waning seconds of the second frame, Gernand Gauthier, sending sparks from the blades of his skates as he invaded the Bears' end of the ice, took passes from Trudel and O'Neil to make the score, 4 to 3, as the buzzer sounded.

Despite that all-out effort to create a tie, in the final period, however, the Lions lost their

Parlay Would Have Returned $2500; 19 Double Tickets Sold on Winners

By Walter Haight A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., Nov. 18.—Prices of $224.60 to win, $82.20 to place and $27.60 to show—were the figures that made the results board sag here this afternoon, as Gloryland, owned by Mrs. George Brown, Jr., wife of one of the stewards, won the first race. Only $94, mostly in $2 tickets was wagered on this son of Kerry Patch which turned a form flip-flop that should end all reversals of form. Beaten off by upward of a city block on each appearance since he won at Laurel a month ago, Gloryland came through today with a half length victory over Mrs. W. E. Snell's Tangelo with W. L. Brann's Molasses Jo third in a field of 12 2-year-olds going 6 furlongs.

Evidence that somebody knew that Gloryland would do some running was brought out by the fact that 19 daily-double tickets off Gloryland and ending with J. V. Tigani's Broiler, winner of the second race, paid $629.50. Broiler, which did a little form reversing of his own, paid an individual mutuel of $23.60. A parlay on the two horses figured better than $2500.

Bright Knight Runs Last

Both winners were saddled by Christmas Brothers. Yancey Christmas sent Gloryland postward while Frank saddled Broiler. Another brother, Donald, saddled Bright Knight, heavily played in the second race and the daughter of Bright Knight ran a terrible last.

Gloryland's winning pay-off was a record for Maryland this year. The winner was strongly handled by Jockey Henri Mora. He brought Gloryland up on the inside to reach a serious contention, wore down Transtan to take command and then had to be hard driven to stave off a closing bid of Tangelo.

The third race also brought excitement of a different nature. Anonymous came into the wire a length ahead of Harebell with White Hot third and Dare Bunny, the favorite, fourth. The leaders were hardly over the line when the stewards turned on the "objection" sign. The jockeys weighed out and with further ado, Anonymous was disqualified, and placed fourth. In the new line-up, Harebell was the winner with White Hot second and Dare Bunny third.

Pays $10.20 Price

The stewards announced that Anonymous squeezed Dare Bunny back and then bumped Harebell repeatedly. Apprentice Trent, who rode Anonymous, was suspended for the remainder of the meeting. Harebell paid a $10.20 mutuel.

The closest finish of the meeting came in the seventh race. Five horses came into the line together and many were so confused that they were betting the horse that was fifth was the runner. After consulting the photo, B. O. F. Randolph's One Only was declared the winner. Playfields was second, Flag Trumpeter was third and Brenner Pass was fourth. One Only, ridden by Trent, paid $14.70.

The $5000 added W. P. Burch Memorial Handicap, featuring the Wednesday program, went to Mrs. See RACES, Page 18, Column 2.

Movie Track to Offer Nine Races Beginning Tomorrow

Post Time To Remain The Same

1:15 p. m. Still To Be Starting Time; Added Daily Race To Make Up Day

Bowie, Md., Nov. 18.—Starting with Friday's program Bowie will offer nine races each day for the remainder of the meeting, it was announced by the management today. Yesterday Bowie's officials canceled the November 30 date and said they would close the season here on Saturday, November 28. Despite the fact that programs will be lengthened, post time for the first race will remain at 1:15 p. m. The added race each day will allow horsemen to shoot at the bowie, but purses as they would have had the meeting gone 16 instead of 15 days.

Informed of Bowie's Saturday closing, A. J. Boyle, president and general manager of Charles Town, obtained permission from Beverly Brown, chairman of the West Virginia Racing Commission to open Charles Town on Monday, November 30.

Dodgers Sign Duce Keahey, Former G. W. Tackle, for 'Skins

Dick Todd May Be Fit For Sunday

Halfback's Shoulder Injury Not Serious; Pre-Game Sellout Looms for Sunday

The Brooklyn Dodgers have added a second George Washington University alumnus to their squad for Sunday's game here with the Redskins. Duce Keahey, former captain and tackle of the Colonials who was signed yesterday.

Walt Fedora, G. W.'s star fullback of the three previous seasons, has been with Brooklyn all year and has been playing with the second Dodger squad for the last few games. He was here last weekend for a conference with his draft board. One of the only games Fedora missed was the Redskins battle in Brooklyn but he will play Sunday.

Keahey was obtained from the New York Giants on waivers. The 215-pound lineman went to work for the Government following his college grid days but was signed by the Giants in May, 1941, released in September of the same year and then resigned September of this year.

The Dodgers have been riddled with injuries, starting with the Bears' game which provoked Coach Mike Getto's new famous squawk about the roughness of the Redskins. Last week Pug Manders, with a wrenched shoulder and Dean McAdams and Wendell Butcher with leg injuries were added to the injury list and in order to get the most out of the crippled squad the Dodgers will go through only light workouts this week.

Blocking Still Bad
Redskin Coach Ray Flaherty returned yesterday after spending two days at home with a heavy cold and sore throat and the first news to greet him was that Dick Todd may be in shape for the Dodgers.

Todd was believed to have suffered a shoulder separation in last Sunday's game with the New York Giants but final X-rays revealed no separation and if the soreness has worked out by Sunday Dick will be in his usual role as triple-threat man and runner par-excellence in the Redskins backfield.

Otherwise, Rookie Dick Poillon or Roy Zimmerman will take over. Flaherty and the squad reviewed pictures of the victory over the Giants Sunday and the coach had words of praise for the 'Skins defensive work but again found fault with the blocking. "Ray excused the fumbling as a bit of over-anxiousness and ball-tackling by the Giants."

Washington fans are apparently intent on seeing the Redskins clinch the Eastern Division title against the Dodgers as tickets continued to move at a rapid pace yesterday and a pre-game sellout looms, the first of the season.

Meanwhile the Redskins players, the business office and the entertainment committee were ignoring the very probable playoff against the Chicago Bears here December 13. The Redskins want to clinch the title first and if they do so this week, either by winning or tying, or a Pittsburgh tie or defeat, all will have three weeks to work on the championship playoff.

G. U. Prep Jayvees Best Young Saints

Pushing over the winning touchdown in the final quarter, Georgetown Prep's Jayvee football team topped St. Alban's youngsters 12 to 6 yesterday on the Little Hoyas' field.

Jack Beyer scored the telling marker on a 6-yard line plunge that culminated a 50-yard drive. Yesterday's was the fourth victory of the season for the Garrett Parkers against one loss and a tie.

Women's Bowling Honors Divided

Thelma Simmers' 137-339 for National Beer and Helene Heinrich's 338 set for Silver Beauty Salon were best scores in the Maryland-District Ladies Bowling League last night with the National Beer girls rolling team highs of 533-1506 to win three from Heehinger No. 2 and go into first. Sanford's, Gifford's Ice Cream and Silver Beauty each whitewashed opponents.

Navy Soccer Team Beats Hopkins, 3 to 0

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 18 (P).—Navy's soccer team warmed up for its annual engagement with Army, Thanksgiving Day, by drubbing Johns Hopkins College of Baltimore, 3-0 today.

A Heap of Redskin Joins Navy

Bob Titchenal, big center of the Washington Redskins, passes the physical examination preliminary to being commissioned as a naval ensign. The examining doctor is Lieut. W. N. Sumner, former football star at Texas Christian U. Titchenal will report to the Navy Pre-Flight School at Chapel Hill, N. C., for training as a physical instructor.

Georgia Preflighters Eyed for Cotton Bowl

Navy School Abounds in Texas Products; Athens Team Coached by Raymond Wolf

Dallas, Nov. 18.—The Athens (Ga.) Naval Preflight School, which abounds in former Texas coaches and football players, was injected today as a possible choice of the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association to play the Southwest Conference champion January 1.

At the preflight school, which lost only to Louisiana State this season, Matty Bell, former Southern Methodist coach, is athletic director, and Raymond (Bear) Wolf, formerly of the Texas Christian University staff, is head coach.

Previously mentioned were Georgia, Georgia Tech, Alabama and Missouri and there was some support for Tulsa and Hardin-Simmons, but it was emphatically stated by the association that no team had been officially approached and that none would be until the conference picture is clearer.

Presently, Texas, Texas Christian and Baylor are virtually tied for the lead. Under a conference rule the champion automatically is invited to be host in the Bowl.

Texas beat Baylor, Baylor beat Texas Christian and Texas Christian beat Texas—so if those three teams should finish in a tie for the title it would pose quite a question of selection.

Gasoline rationing undoubtedly would affect the attendance, but officials of the association figure there should be as many spectators as last January 1 when 32,000 saw Alabama and Texas A. and M. play. The immediate Dallas territory should insure that number.

While Hardin-Simmons was frequently mentioned as a possible choice, it was indicated an out-of-State team would be more acceptable in order to give the bowl game more of a national aspect.

Tulsa was not considered too strong a bet because Baylor of the Southwest Conference already has played the Hurricane and Arkansas will meet it next week.

Bears Are Tops
The World Champion Chicago Bears, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia are the only teams to run back punts for touchdowns, while the Bears are well in front in turning intercepted passes into scores.

They've done it three times—the combined total of all other teams in the league. The others to score on interceptions are Green Bay, New York and Brooklyn.

The Bears spend more time than any other club in the league in developing kick-off plays and their stress has paid dividends. They've brought back 18 kick-offs an average of 29.3 yards to top that department.

In total yardage the Bears and the Green Bay Packers are engaged in a tight battle for the lead. The Bears have rolled up 2779 yards in eight games to 2769 for the Packers.

Green Bay and Washington are the leading passing teams. The Packers have completed 126 out of 245 tosses and the Redskins have clicked with 113 out of 213 efforts.

Among the individuals the week's top spot is held by Sammy Baugh of Washington.

Baugh increased his forward passing lead over Cecil Isbell of Green Bay by completing 19 out of 26 passes against the New York Giants. "Slingshot" Sammy now has hit on 108 out of 185 passes. Isbell has 103 completions in 190 attempts.

Baugh needs only 10 completions in his remaining two games against Brooklyn and Detroit to establish a new all-time league record for the number of completions in a season. Isbell set the mark of 117 a year ago.

Bill Dudley, the Pittsburgh Steelers' great first year back, continues to top the ball carriers with 591 yards in 131 attempts. Merlyn Condit of Brooklyn is second with 524 yards in 86 tries and Andy Farkas of Washington third with 361 yards in 93 attempts.

Don Hutson of Green Bay remains far in front in pass receiving and scoring. He has snagged 97 passes to 21 for his closest rival, Dante Magnani of Cleveland.

Four Colleges Threatening Offense Record

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Another of the American football statistical bureau's prize modern records is headed for the ash can—threatened not by one team but by four.

It's the total offense all time high of 375.4 yards per game set in 1937 by Colorado when Byron (Whizzer) White was at his peak. And here in mid-November four of the Nation's gridiron teams are rolling along at better than 400 yards a game.

Riding high in this stratospheric 400-plus region, where normally no team remains past its fourth or fifth game, are Georgia, at 444.4 yards a contest; Ohio State at 420.3; Tulsa at 414.9 and Boston College at 404.6.

"It's really unbelievable," said Homer Cooke, head man of the statistical bureau. "The season started off normally as far as team offenses were concerned. We had six teams in the 400-plus bracket the first week, and the second week there were only three teams. It looked like the usual tapering off process had begun."

List Dwindled
"However, the next two weeks four teams were over the 400 mark. Then two weeks ago the list dwindled to two and I was sure they'd drop to normal, with the best team lucky to finish the season averaging better than 370 a game."

"Now we have four up there over 400."

Georgia's mighty undefeated eleven has amassed 3999 yards in its nine games, 2305 by rushing and 1694 by passing. But on game averages the Bulldogs from the Southeastern Conference rate only sixth in rushing and second in passing.

The ground gaining leadership still rests with Texas' little Hardin-Simmons College, which has averaged 350.9 yards a game to Ohio State's 314.6 yards, Boston College's 295.9 yards, Missouri's 285.3 and Texas' 259.1. Georgia creeps into sixth place with 256.1 yards rushing per game.

Tulsa, No. 2 in total offense, has built up to that position on a passing average of 211.8 yards, with Georgia second at 188.2 yards, Columbia third at 178.1 yards, Creighton fourth at 147 yards and Southern Methodist fifth at 146.4 yards.

A New Leader
For the third straight week there's a new leader in total defense. This time it's William and Mary, permitting its opponents a gain of only 99.1 yards a game.

Miami (Fla.), last week's No. 1 defensive array, is in second with 105.1 yards allowed its foes each game. Detroit is third with 108.8 yards, Tulsa fourth with 114 yards and Boston College fifth with 115.7 yards.

William and Mary, however, is in front neither in team rushing defense nor passing. At 242.4 yards, Boston College has allowed its opponents best foes to an average of 26.1 yards. William and Mary is second at 37.9 yards, Texas third at 60.8, Alabama fourth at 61.9, and Detroit fifth at 64.5.

Against Miami seven opponents have averaged only 34.4 yards by passing. Tulsa has the next best aerial defensive mark, 36.3 yards, followed by Harvard, 37.5 yards, Manhattan 39.7 yards and Crichton 42.9 yards.

The two team punting leaders remained unchanged. Tulsa's boots have averaged 41.98 yards and North Carolina State's 40.64. North Carolina is third at 40.58, Wyoming fourth at 40.28, and Tennessee fifth at 40.27.

Ernie Dusek Wins Another As Opponent Prefers Floor

Ernie Dusek, who hasn't lost a wrestling argument since sometime before the opening night of Tobacco Road, kept his average intact when he defeated Johnny (Tripod) Long in the feature match at Turner's Arena before 1000 fans last night. Long was counted out after 28 minutes when he couldn't continue the scuffle, following a flight out of the ring. When an attempted flying head scissors missed he plummeted over the ropes, landing heavily on his right shoulder.

The bulky Dusek, 235 pounds of the most lovable villainy Washington has ever seen, staged his customary fine performance and had the audience despising him before the match was 2 minutes old. Slugging and gouging were his forte, and when he wasn't squared off with Long he was busily engaged in a hilarious feud with Referee Casey Berger.

Dusek and Berger—buddies of long standing—always show affection with a series of snide tricks whenever they meet under professional circumstances. Last night, however, the arbiter took honors when he sneaked in a classic slug that all but put Dusek's head amongst the patrons. At the time Long had Ernie spread-eagled with a Full Nelson, and the target was too tempting for Berger to pass up. Uncranking a lusty right, the referee gave out with a wallop that hurt. Prior to that, they had pulled each other's hair, stomped toes and cuffed.

The wiry Long, who is as tough as the steel he works with in a Baltimore shipyard, was giving a good account of himself right up to the finish, and several times had Dusek in trouble. On the wrestling side he gave out with more tricky maneuvers than a pro quarterback, and he augmented his science with slugging that came easily from his days as a pug.

Several times Johnny almost had Dusek capitulating with body scissors and headlocks. As the end came he was using a series of flying head scissors that have been good enough to win past matches here. And it was the missing of one of these that brought his downfall.

Morris Shapiro took a rough semifinal from Joe De Vatto in 17 minutes, downing that fellow with a bruising corkscrew toehold from which he had to be assisted from the ring. Shapiro modestly claims to be the sole user of this particular brand of murder, save for an old timer whom he was vague about naming.

Gino Garibaldi and Max Krauser struggled to a draw in which the naughtiness honors were about even.

Something called The Yellow Mask, a gigantic individual enveloped in a hood (yellow, strangely enough), won over Chief Bamba Tabu by use of a Cobra Clutch after 15 minutes. Tabu, an alumnus of the rival muscle trust who used to be billed as a genuine Seminole Indian chieftain, now confesses he is really a member of the Yaqui tribe of Mexico.

Abie Coleman and Henry Piers drew in a rough opening match.

Armstrong Beats Dunbar By 19-0 Score

A crowd of approximately 1500 witnessed the annual grid clash of Armstrong and Dunbar High School elevens yesterday at Griffith Stadium, which terminated with Armstrong on the long end of a 19-0 score, and in second place behind the champion Cardozo eleven.

Terry Day and Spears were the individual stars of the game, the former accounting for the first touchdown toward the end of the first quarter when he plunged 7 yards through the line for the goal, and the latter ably assisting in carrying the ball down the field. Day added the extra point from placement.

Dunbar braced after the initial touchdown, and held its opponents safe until the final quarter. They threatened repeatedly to score, but luck was not with them. They were fated to go through the city series without a point to their credit, Cardozo having defeated them, 33-0.

Day went through the center of the Dunbar line for the second touchdown in the final quarter, and Clarence Stewart added another six points shortly thereafter when he intercepted Hall's long pass in midfield and ran 50 yards to cross the goal line standing up.

A pass, Day to Powell, failed for the extra point after the former touchdown, Armstrong being off side. McLane's attempted placement boot for the final extra point was blocked.

Touchdowns—Day (2), Stewart. Points after touchdown—Day, Substitution—F. Edwards for Williams, Cassidy for Porter, Stafford for A. Edwards, Runes for Tolliver, Smith for Bowman, Clark for Scott, Powell for McLane, Davis for Seagraves, A. Williams for Everett, Seagraves for Edwards, Ford for J. Ross, E. Gallaudet Beats Hopkins, 15 to 50, in Harrier Event

The unbeaten cross-country team of Gallaudet College added another smashing victory yesterday, sweeping the first seven places to defeat Johns Hopkins, 15 to 50.

Rudolph Hines, first to finish, set a new record for the 3-mile course, beating out his teammate, Capt. Huffman, by a stride, in 16 minutes, 34 seconds. Gallaudet's Daulton, Aims and Stanley finished third, fourth and fifth, respectively.

Gallaudet thus becomes a heavy favorite to win the annual Mason-Dixon Conference cross-country meet to be staged on Monday at the Gallaudet course with teams of nine colleges in the field.

ABC Tournament Is Canceled

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 18 (AP).—The American Bowling Congress' 1943 tournament, an event which annually attracts more active participants than any other sports feature in the Nation, today was canceled for one year due to the war emergency.

The decision to postpone the event, scheduled to be held in Buffalo's Memorial Auditorium, March 18 through May 19, was reached at a special joint meeting of the A. B. C. and Buffalo Bowling Association officials and A. B. C. President Martin G. Unmacht of Duquesne, Iowa.

2 Class 'A' Va. Elevens Are Unbeaten

Richmond, Va., Nov. 18.—Only two class "A" high school football teams—Petersburg and Hampton—remained undefeated and untied in the Old Dominion today.

One other team, however, has played only a single game. Arlington defeated Lane High School, 18-0, but hasn't played enough games to be counted in the running for the northern district championship.

Petersburg, with seven victories, is leading the race for the central district championship, and Hampton, with six wins, tops the eastern district.

Two other elevens—John Marshall of Richmond and Danville—have only ties to mar their otherwise perfect records. Danville has scored the most points of the 17 class "A" schools in the State, having rolled up a total of 153 points, while Petersburg is second in the scoring department with 147.

The best defensive mark is held by Hampton, whose opponents have been able to gather only 12 points. Danville has yielded only 13 points.

The standings in the northern district:

Scout to Report on Camilli

Rickey Sends Ted McGrew For Confab

Dodger President Awaits Particulars; Lays Rebuilding Plans for 1943

New York, Nov. 18.—The Brooklyn Dodgers want to know if they do or don't have a first baseman for next season and President Branch Rickey has decided not to wait till the 1943 contracts are mailed to find out if Dolph Camilli really has retired.

Rickey disclosed today that Ted McGrew, the Dodgers' chief scout, is in California and that part of his mission will be to check up on Camilli at his ranch at Laytonville, Calif., where Brooklyn's veteran captain last week told newspapermen he would not be willing to play for any Eastern club.

On the report that Rickey gets from McGrew will depend whether trading campaign the Dodgers undertake at the winter baseball meetings in Chicago next month.

Up till now Rickey says "I only know what I read in the papers." McGrew went to the coast a couple of weeks ago and for 10 days I never heard a word from him. I didn't know where he was or anything. Why a man could walk to the coast in ten days.

He's Trifle Quiet

"I now have received a forwarding address for him, but haven't heard another word. I would say McGrew is just about the most uncommunicative man in the world. He reminds me more and more of the best friend I ever had, Charley Barrett (famed Cardinal scout)."

As soon as Rickey settles the question of his manager for next season, and this probably will be done tomorrow at a conference he has scheduled with Leo Durocher, the club's new president will start laying his plans for rebuilding the team this winter.

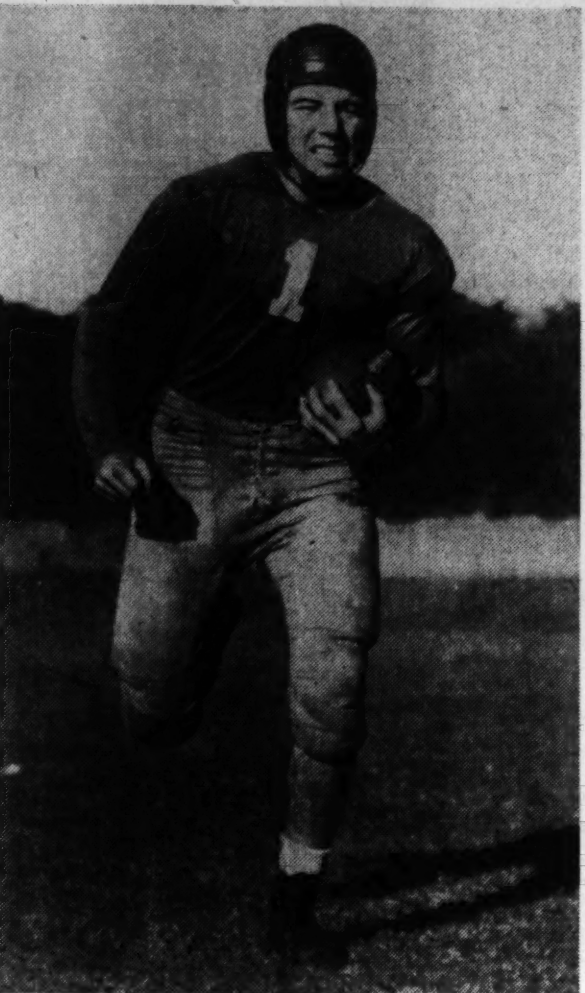

Rickey already has made a survey of the draft status of all the players on the Brooklyn roster and has found at least a dozen who might be called to service at any time.

This group of men who either are single or are married but have no children, includes Durocher, Pitches Curt Davis, Kirby Higbe, Hugh Casey and Chet Kehn, Catcher Cliff Dapper, infielders Peeewe Reese, Stan Rojek and Les Burge and outfielders Pete Reiser, Johnny Rizzo and Augie Galan.

Burge, who was at Montreal last year, was being groomed to succeed Camilli. Therefore if the veteran decides to give up his better than $20,000 salary with the Dodgers to stay at home on his ranch with his family of five children, or to manage a Coast League club, then Rickey will have to touch off the winter trading season with a deal for a first baseman.

That is why the Dodgers want to find out right away whether Camilli meant what he said, or was just opening contract maneuvers.

and Jack Mier, back, all of whom will start.

Rufus Vincent, tackle, and Elmer Rigby, Joe Hoopengardner and Lou Chacos, backs, are the other seniors, and all have been valuable assets in the Shaughnessy machine this year.

Gilmore and Chacos are Washington boys, being products of Tech and Central, respectively, with the former being the only four-letter athlete in the university. Gilmore has his "M" in track, boxing and basketball, in addition to football.

But it is certain these eight will not be all who will be missing when the call for grid practice is answered next September 1. Some are sure to be called into the services and even if the present juniors are able to return to finish their courses, such as Tommy Mont and Jack Wright, the great backs; Jack Dittmar, tackle; Bob James, end, and Eddie Chovanes, guard, they would be on hand for only the first three games, as under the advanced program of three semesters a year, they would graduate early next October.

Only three sophomores have been conspicuous in Maryland's play this season, Bill Flyck, guard and center; Paul Byrd, center, and Hubert Werner, the most efficient all-around back the Old Liners have had in many years.

Practically all the senior and junior football players are in the advanced ROTC course and are in line for commissions as second lieutenants in the Army.

Coch-Saughnessy, paying no attention to comparative scores, continued to push the Old Liners in their drills yesterday, giving them a dose of both offensive and defensive tactics.

fourth straight game—the hard way.

The first period progressed along rough-and-ready lines as both teams made hard body checks and a few deep but fruitless plunges into enemy territory. Big Hank Dyck made one earnest sally at Goalie Ericson, who made a save that looked easier than it was.

In that second period scoring feat, however, the puck found its way past Storie as Harry Frost, big right-wing for the visitors, took passes from his cohorts on the Bears' line and plopped in a goal at 1:30 while Storie was far off base.

O'Neil Scores

Eighteen seconds later—before the cheers of a smattering of Hershey fans had died out—Peggy O'Neil snatched the disc after it had rebounded from Ceryance's stick and made an easy tuck into the net. Phillips and Trudel, who had zig-zagged it down the ice and into scoring position, were credited with assists.

Then, as Storie minded half an acre of ice directly in front of, but not quite close enough to his net, Frost again combined with Kiltrea and Sullivan to make the second Hershey score at 8:08.

The next marker for the visitors was due to circumstances far from Storie's control, however, as Fred Hergert, fleet-footed Bears' center, took the puck on his own blue line, breezed into the hosts' territory, and rushed the puck into the net almost before the spectators were aware of the imminent danger.

Washington spurs—Lorain, G. Gauthier, Dick Muller, Richard Jamieson, Furell, Amundson, Ritsen, Hershey sources—Smith, Herrett, Dailor, Fitzer, Jenkins, Kline, Lauen, Trudel, Eklund, Lee, Linsen—Lan Burras.

Referee—Edmond Lee. Linesman—Lan Burras.

First-period scoring: No scoring. Penalties—Trudel (tripping), Moe (tripping).

Second-period scoring: (1) Hershey—Frost (Kiltrea-Sullivan), 1:30; (2) Washington—O'Neil (Trudel-Phillips), 1:48; (3) Hershey—Frost (Sullivan-Kiltrea), 8:08; (4) Hershey—Hergert (Sorell-Lorain), 11:10; (5) Washington—Jamieson (Ritsen-Smith), 11:15; (6) Hershey—Frost (Sullivan-Kiltrea), 11:50. Penalties—Johnson (tripping), Smith (tripping), O'Neil (holding).

Third-period scoring: No scoring. Penalties—Jenkins, Jamieson (hitting), Smith (tripping), O'Neil (holding).

Bank Personnel Turnover Put At 30% in Year

William Powers of New York, director of customer and personnel relations of the American Bankers Association, told member representatives of the Fifth Federal Reserve District that 1939 member banks in 322 cities have lost 31,939 staff members to military service, war industries and other reasons. The report covered the past 12 months.

"This reflects an average turnover of 30 per cent," Powers said. "To replace these, the banks hired a total of 37,432 men and women in the 12-month period. At the end of the 12-month period, the staff members included 43 per cent women, as against 33 per cent at the beginning of the period."

"The problems faced by the banks now are manifold; they include such questions as the difficulties encountered in replacing lost personnel, the possibility of serious breakdowns in service due to insufficient or untrained manpower, the anticipation of heavy layoffs of temporary workers when men return from military service and many others," Powers said.

Around 75 bankers attended the meeting, which was held in Richmond.

What's the plan behind the play...now?

THIS SLIPPERY BACKFIELD needs a new set of signals. Its power plays and double-cross bucks are old stuff to an enemy that is getting tougher. Intelligent people are asking what's likely to happen now—and they want intelligent answers.

These people are interested in diagnosing the moves, in sensing the strategy—in seeing with their brains as well as their eyes. They're saying "No thanks!" to warmed-over news and half-baked deductions no matter how they are garnished.

And right there is the reason intelligent Americans by the thousands are turning to NEWSWEEK—the news magazine that is edited to the high mental capacity of a group, rather than to the physical capacity of its presses—edited to the nation's leaders, rather than the nation's population.

This group of thinking Americans wants news. To give it to them NEWSWEEK has built up an alert and far-flung organization that reports the news... crisply, forcefully... with pertinent facts unobscured by personal petulance.

This group of thinking Americans wants the significance of the news. To give it to them the pages of NEWSWEEK reflect the keen judgment of eminent men who are qualified to weigh and evaluate the stream of news that pulses in from all corners of a tortured earth.

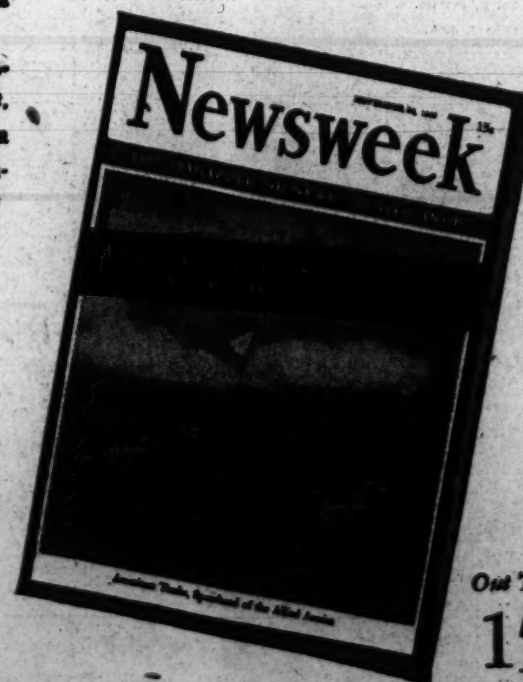

Among these men are Admiral William V. Pratt and Major General Stephen O. Fuqua on the war... Raymond Moley on national affairs... Ernest K. Lindley on the Washington front... and Ralph Robey, far sighted economist. All of these authorities, in addition to interpreting the news, regularly conduct their own columns in NEWSWEEK... giving you their signed opinion on important events and trends.

And to top it off, NEWSWEEK brings you the Periscope, an exclusive feature that predicts with uncanny accuracy news that hasn't happened—yet. Is it any wonder that NEWSWEEK is eagerly awaited by more than half a million intelligent, opinion-forming families—or that it has a larger concentrated not paid circulation among leaders in business, industry and government than any other magazine?

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

Modification Foreseen In Draft Order

If you're one of those estimated 25,000 Federal workers whose draft deferment was wiped away by the President's order you should wait developments. And developments are bound to come soon. Clarification, and in all probability, modification of the order is certain to be made. The inside story behind the order is the fact that the President issued it on his own. The President didn't consult with the War Manpower, Budget Bureau, Civil Service or Selective Service officials. Officials in these agencies had gotten together and had worked out a draft deferment plan that would have been applied uniformly to all Federal agencies and which would have been in line with the draft deferment policy for private workers.

The President's order would just about wreck the FBI OPA, the Army arsenals, Navy yards and many another Federal agency. It has the effect of telling people generally that essential war work can't be done in Government. But if the same work is performed in war plants the people would be deferred. An identical draft policy should apply to both Government and industry. Of course there are draft dodgers in Government and they should be punished but the entire Federal service shouldn't be made to suffer for the acts of a few. The President's order appears to be an answer to Senator Byrd and other critics of the Government's personnel policies.

Gene Duffield, the secretary, has been appointed assistant to Navy Undersecretary Forrestal. . . . War's Demobilized Records Branch will be moved to High Point, N. C. The transfer will start next week. Housing is said to be plentiful in the city. About 500 employees are involved. . . . No employee in the Office of Defense Transportation will be given leave during the holiday periods from November 24 to 30 and from December 18 to January 10. ODT wants to set a good example for other agencies. However, ODT hasn't asked other agencies to cancel Thanksgiving leaves. ODT employees, incidentally, will "be permitted to be absent on Thanksgiving and Christmas days."

OPA Transfer Sought

This will come as a shock to Office of Price Administration officials but there's a new and determined move on to transfer, all our clerical employees to Suitland, Md. It all sounds fantastic, but it's true nevertheless. The plan calls for the retention in the Census Building at Second and D Streets of Census' machine tabulation division which occupies about 20 per cent of the building. This division was supposed to move to Suitland with the remainder of Census and Uncle Sam has spent tens of dollars installing wires at Suitland for the machines.

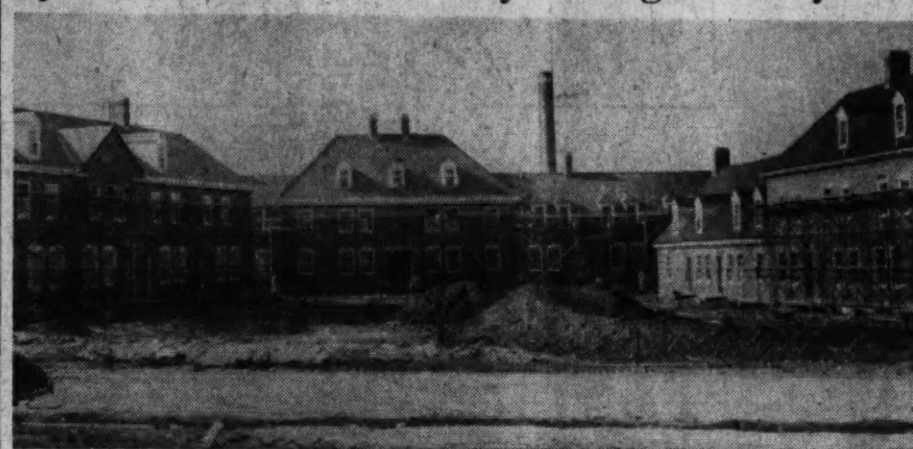

The Census machines are used to do tabulating work for WPB, War, Navy, Lend Lease, and Selective Service. It proposed that the machines be kept in the Census building and that the Bituminous Coal tabulating work be turned over to Census. How OPA could operate with its staff divided between Suitland and Washington hasn't been determined. Census would have the same problem. The ridiculous part of it all is the fact that the Suitland building was constructed for OPA but Census was ordered to move into it at the last minute. Several hundred thousand dollars were spent doing over the building to suit Census' needs and now OPA may be moved there after all.

The War Department yesterday took a big step toward improving relations with its civilian employees. The 900 supervisors in the Office of Maj. Gen. Howard K. Laughry, chief of finances, were told of the impending reorganization of that office. The supervisors were told that the same functions would be continued and that personnel shifts would be made without upsetting the classifications or grades of the employees. General Laughry pointed out that his office had been expanded 20-fold—from 500 to 10,000 employees—and that he knew mistakes had been made. Now, he said, he wanted to rectify them.

Control Test Out of Control

Unauthorized Siren Blast Gives Southeast Blackout Jitters

Touched off by the accidental sounding of an air-raid siren in the St. Elizabeths Hospital area last night, Southeast Washington had an unscheduled—and unauthorized—blackout.

Sirens wailed their warnings at the Navy Yard and in the vicinity of Naylor Road Southeast. Wardens ran to their posts and householders were ordered to douse the lights. The excitement spread to some police cars, for the police radio dispatcher several times ordered scout or other cars not to turn out any lights.

The only alarm was in the homes where wardens ordered lights out. Control Center Test.

What had occurred was that the Office of Civilian Defense had ordered a test of control centers, and special units, with simulated incidents. Some of these entailed the calling out of fire apparatus and medical units.

These tests moved smoothly and there was evident satisfaction in reports of inspections made by officials. Col. Lemuel Bolles, civilian defense director for the District, had just stepped out of the door of the Municipal Building when Southeast's sirens began their howling, inspired by the preliminary blast from St. Elizabeths.

He remarked to a reporter: "I bet a friend a lunch that although the public had been adequately warned through the newspapers and letters had been sent to responsible officials telling there would be no blackout, that some of the sirens would sound." He won.

Flood of Inquiries. The official tests lasted from 8 p. m. until 9 p. m., but the telephone calls into The Post switchboard asking about the blackout were still coming in at a late hour.

At C and First Streets Southeast the wardens turned out in force and ordered lights put out although some of the householders had not heard the sirens. The wardens insisted upon utter darkness in the homes, although the street lights continued to burn brightly and residents insisted they heard no sirens.

Tests of control centers also were held in nearby Montgomery County where centers at Silver Spring and Takoma Park and east of Rock Creek in the suburban area were tested.

Victory Volunteer Drive Is Extended

Its two-day registration of "Victory Volunteers" an acknowledged failure, the District Civilian Defense Volunteer Office decided yesterday to extend the drive indefinitely at two downtown registration centers.

For this purpose, the C. D. V. O. headquarters at 2324 F Street Northwest will be open until 5 p. m. daily and until 8 p. m. Tuesdays. A downtown registration center at 1321 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest will be open daily until 5 p. m. and Tuesdays and Thursdays until 8 p. m.

Helene Moore, executive assistant in the C. D. V. O., attributed the failure of Washington residents to respond to the call for 15,000 new volunteers to the fact that the importance of the work to be done by the volunteers was not understood.

"They will be the contact between the defense office and the individual families throughout the war. It will not only be their job to inform their neighbors as to present rationing plans but anything that comes up," she said. Miss Moore said that in other cities where the victory volunteer plan is functioning smoothly, salvage increased from 200 to 300 per cent.

Plenty of Firewood If You Get It Yourself

An answer to the reported shortage of kindling and fireplace wood in the District area came yesterday from the State Farm Administration—there's plenty but you'll have to get it yourself.

Jerome Dahl, acting assistant to the director, told The Post: "There is no shortage of wood as such. There are plenty of trees if anyone will cut them down. It's a problem of manpower and transportation and we are encouraging farmers and consumers as well to cut more wood."

"I suggest four or five people get together and go out into the country and chop their own wood. I did it myself and it isn't too hard. There is no trouble in obtaining the farmer's permission at a nominal fee."

As for coal and wood dealers, they had no wood on hand and most painted a gloomy picture for the future.

J. F. Agnew & Co. officials reported they had been depending on farmers for transporting the wood and farmers, because of lack of assistance have been too busy.

United States Solid Fuel Coordinator's Office reported that in Silver Spring, Md., home owners were chopping their own wood and courting the countryside for kindling.

The spokesman suggested that District residents might be assisting the United States Park Service if they started similar scouring trips through Rock Creek Park in search of fallen branches and twigs.

'Share Your Meat' Program Discussed

The nutrition committee of the District OCD sponsored a meeting of nutrition experts in the United States Chamber of Commerce last night to discuss plans for a "share your meat" campaign. It is planned to have the nutrition experts give instructions to the Victory Volunteers at a meeting November 30 on how to instruct housewives in using less meat.

House Rushing Bill to Exempt D. C. Property From Taxation

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee is scheduled to give the House a favorable report on the McCarran-Hunter District property tax exemption bill today, preparing the way for quick action on the measure.

House leaders have given assurances of their aid in getting the bill before the House at the earliest possible moment, and little opposition is seen to its passage.

The bill is a duplicate of one introduced in the Senate by Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee, which is now pending before that chamber. It redefines the regulations governing property tax exemption for educational, charitable and religious organizations in the District. Representative Hunter (Demo-

School Board Sponsors Nursery Plan

Approval Is Given Revision of Alcohol, Narcotics Portions Of Health Course

Establishment of the much-discussed nursery school service in local public schools came nearer realization yesterday as the Board of Education assumed sponsorship of a WPA nursery to be put into operation within the month.

Pending Congressional legislation is expected to enable such plans to be adopted officially by the schools. Prior to this the board had simply endorsed the desirability of such a project.

Simultaneously, the board approved revisions modifying the scientific and stressing the moral evils ascribed to alcohol and narcotics in the senior high school health course. This action was final, with adoption of the newly-revised sections expected in the schools sometime this month.

Sponsorship of the nursery, scheduled to occupy 310, 312, 314 B Street Southeast, involves no expenditure of public school funds or use of public school personnel as teachers, it was pointed out by Superintendent of Schools Dr. Frank W. Ballou.

In Principle Only

"It is a sponsorship only in principle," he told members of the board. "Indicated by this move is the board's willingness to cooperate in a planned comprehensive project covering nursery school services for children in public schools."

Although no school money will be used in maintaining the center, school officials will be consulted on matters relating to the center's administration and methods of instruction, all of which will be provided out of WPA money.

To profit by the center, Dr. Ballou said, will be children, for the most part, of families where the mother is required to be away from the home because of work connected with the war.

The State has been working on legislation making possible the institution of such nursery school service in the schools for preschool age children, and until congressional sanction is given such a plan, to be supported through school funds, school officials can participate only in "extra-curricular" schemes similar to that of the WPA center.

Is Compromise

After a somewhat stormy career, which began with charges by Dr. James R. Gannon that it was "grossly exaggerated and inaccurate," the two revisions, which tended to minimize the detrimental effects of alcohol and narcotics, the health course to be presented to the high schools this month is "a compromise, but with a great deal more truth than originally."

Now softened by continuous pressure by anti-smoke and drink organizations and various civic and religious leaders, the revised prospectus admits fully of the "social and moral evils" of the subjects in question, and advises that they are habit-forming and in many instances responsible for otherwise premature death.

It was hoped by many persons in opposition to any changes to the course that the board would postpone action, and when the board's decision was given more than one disinterested rose up and called out about "the injustice of such action," and that Dr. Gannon should be ousted from the board.

For Shelter Use

Given board approval, after much discussion, was a recommendation allowing the use of certain public school buildings as air raid shelters to the public. Such use, it was agreed, would be largely contingent on the extent to which school children used the buildings for that purpose, and the number of casualty stations or recreational programs housed in the buildings. Dr. Ballou will be in charge of arrangements.

The board authorized the committee on legislation and the superintendent to seek a conference with the Commissioners to expedite legislation granting increases in the pay of employees in the schools.

Also Approved

Also approved by the board were the following recommendations:

1. Establishment in the senior high schools of the Victory Corps. This plan has been in effect in a number of schools for some weeks.

2. That lumber and other materials be taken from the recently purchased Suburban Gardens recreation park and used by the vocational schools.

3. Request of the Abbott School of Fine and Commercial Art for permission to award scholarships to senior high school students graduating in January or June.

4. Request of the Kenna-Main auxiliary of the American Legion for permission to make an annual scholarship award each June to a girl graduate of the Anacostia High School who enters an accredited school of nursing.

5. Purchase of equipment for use in the aviation course in the senior high schools.

Ballet Symphony Program Is Received Enthusiastically

By Ray C. B. Brown

SOLOIST—Making-up backstage before the opening last night of the Ballet Russe in Constitution Hall is Ballerina Marian Golden.

National Symphony Orchestra collaborated with the Ballet Theater on Wednesday night in Constitution Hall. Program: Princess Aurora (music by Chaikovsky), Pas de Quatre (music by Cesare Pugni), Bluebird (music by Offenbach). Conductor: Antal Dorati.

Presenting last evening in Constitution Hall the first of two joint performances with the National Symphony Orchestra, the program at the Ballet Theater was warmly welcomed by a large assemblage. The program, which had to be carefully selected to meet the limitations of staging and the absence of decor, was arranged to present three distinct phases of ballet: the Russian Imperial period, the Victorian epoch and the modern adaptation of technique. Incidentally, this order of things happened to illustrate exactly what the Ballet Theater is trying to do—to retain only those traditions which can unite the ballet with the theater in the offering of spectacles which have dramatic as well as decorative values.

"Princess Aurora," which used to be, under the title of "Aurora's Wedding," the final act of Chaikovsky's "The Sleeping Beauty," had been modified considerably by Anton Dolin, who has taken a dance here and dance there from the entire ballet and formed a rather stilted suite of divertissements. One felt that the action lacked conviction, as though the dancers were really not interested in going through the routine of the poses and the formal ballet patterns.

For that reason perhaps, the two numbers that brought down the house were the Bluebird episode danced with grace and charm by Karen Conrad and Ian Gibson, and the comic interlude of the Three Ivans, which had no place in the original Petipa choreography but has been devised by Bronislava Nijinska.

"Bluebird," which the company has presented here before, was the popular hit of the evening not only because of its farcical fun but also because the dancers were wholly in the spirit, while Offenbach's operetta of the same title is in his characteristic vein of parody.

Members of the Institute panel were Dr. Edmundo de Miranda Jordao, president of the Institute of the Order of Brazilian Lawyers; Dr. Raoul Herrera-Arango, second secretary of the Cuban Embassy; Dr. Roberto Cordova, legal counselor of the Embassy of Mexico; Dr. Mario Rodriguez, counsel of the Embassy of Chile; Dr. Hector D. Castor, minister of El Salvador; Donald Richberg; Edmund L. Jones; and Col. William S. Culbertson.

New Budget Is Aimed at Lifting Debt

58 Millions Asked For Needs in 1944; Loan Repayment Stem Increased

Unusual in wartime budgets, the $58,068,924 request for 1944 District needs sent yesterday by the Commissioners to the Budget Bureau is more concerned with paying off old debts than with incurring new ones.

Although the new figure is $1,755,073 more than the present appropriation, most items have been slashed or only moderately raised, except for the loan repayment item, which has been jumped three million dollars and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission item, which is increased $709,580.

This slack is taken up in reduction of other major items, principally the highway fund, where construction is out of the question until after the war, because of the impossibility to obtain building materials.

Park Account Increased

The commissioners decided that rather than freeze the funds in these inactive accounts, it would be better to use the surplus revenue in paying off the District debts to the PWA and other Federal agencies.

Consequently, the Park and Planning Commission account was increased to pay off a larger part of the seven million dollars borrowed under the Capper-Cramton Act for playground improvement. An additional $1,500,000 was added to the annual repayment of the $18,150,000 PWA loan of which $9,982,500 is yet to be repaid.

Although a new item of $750,000 for blackout expenses appears, this actually represents an economy. Instead of the present practice of borrowing one million dollars now and then from Congress, the commissioners, now paying off the first one million dollars, intend to wipe off this debt and then finance the civilian defense program on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Also included in the repayment program is the $500,000 actually used to date from the two Lanham Act appropriations in which the District has shared.

Some Items Unlisted

Nearly two million dollars of District expenses do not show up in the budget, which means that the actual operating costs for 1941 will be around $60,595,724. Among these unlisted items are proportionate shares of the cost of Freedman's Hospital, the District Court and the Court of Appeals. Since the hospital expense is shared by the Interior Department, and the courts by the Department of Justice, District officials explain that these items cannot be included until the budgets of these departments are released. Also, there is usually one million dollars counted on to take care of supplementary or deficiency items. However, for 1944 this reserve fund is being boosted to $1,500,000.

Brother, Sister Die Within 12 Hours Of Each Other

Less than 12 hours separated in death Mrs. Madge Ford, 50, and her brother, Corbin Costella, 63, both of 226 G Street Southwest.

At 7:30 p. m. Tuesday, Costella returned home from doing odd jobs in the neighborhood and found his sister dead in bed. She had been ill for some time, he said. Her death, according to a doctor from Casualty Hospital, resulted from a heart attack.

Yesterday at 6:20 a. m. the dead woman's husband, Robert Ford, found Costella unconscious in his room of the three-room flat above a junk yard. He was dead when an ambulance arrived.

Both bodies were taken to the District Morgue and post mortem examination revealed both deaths resulted from natural causes. Ford said both his wife and Costella had not been well for some time.

Ford is employed in the junk yard under his flat.

Green, Murray Back Christmas Seal Drive

Support of the Christmas Seal Campaign is important if we are to avoid a serious breakdown in our national standard of health, said William Green, president of the A. F. of L., and Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O., yesterday in endorsing the thirty-sixth annual seal drive which opens next Monday.

Both men urged that the seal campaign not be neglected in this time of increased relief drives, for it would be "most tragic." They advised that this year's campaign be pushed to the limit.

Roosevelt Operetta

The annual operetta at Roosevelt High School will be given tonight and tomorrow at 8:15 p. m. in the school auditorium. The play concerns an American aviator and wealthy friend preventing a revolution in a Latin American town.

5 Cases of Undulant Fever Revealed in Fairfax County

Five cases of undulant fever in Fairfax County were reported by the Fairfax Health Department yesterday.

District of Columbia milk inspectors, however, expressed no concern that Washingtonians might be affected as all milk from that county sold in Washington is pasteurized.

In Fairfax County the United States health authorities immediately began an inspection of dairy herds, as the fever is caused by drinking milk from cows infected with Bang's disease. They found 59 out of 85 cows, in two herds, infected.

The announcement of the five instances of the disease in the Virginia county was made by Dr. James A. Dolce, Health Department director. All victims are now recovering, he said.

Pasteurization kills the fever germ and in consequence Dr. Dolce and officials of the United States Public Health Service here advised consumers to use only the pasteurized product, or, if they preferred, to boil it before using.

Pasteurization is done by keeping milk at a temperature of 143 degrees Fahrenheit for 30 minutes. District milk inspectors said that but little raw milk was sold in Washington, about one-half of one percent, and that came from herds grazing on ranges free from the disease.

Byrnes Chosen To Shepherd New Tax Bill

By the Associated Press

Director James F. Byrnes of the Office of Economic Stabilization probably will "run interference" for a new tax measure—expected to include some form of compulsory savings—in Congress early next year, authoritative Administration sources said yesterday.

Drafted by the Treasury Department, the measure will be announced in broad outline by President Roosevelt in his annual budget message early in January, said these sources, who cannot be quoted by name.

Reasons for Choice

They said Byrnes had been chosen by the President to speak for the bill on Capitol Hill for three reasons:

1. Byrnes will of necessity be well acquainted with the measure since it must fit into his general stabilization program.

2. As a former Senator, the economic chief is well known and popular in Congress.

3. Viewing the bill as part of the entire national wartime economic program, Congress might be inclined to give it a better reception than if it were presented merely as a new tax measure.

Treasury officials have stressed repeatedly that any such new measure—variously estimated at raising from six billion dollars to more than 15 billion dollars—would contain compulsory savings of some type, and Byrnes' office was said to have approved the theory of the plan as a stabilization step.

Future Earnings Only

However, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau has pointed out that this does not refer to existing savings, with which he asserted the Government has no intention of tampering. It concerns only the disposition of future earnings.

Just how much opposition the measure, following closely on the heels of the record war tax bill passed last month by Congress, will meet remained strictly a matter of speculation. Some Congressmen have openly advocated a year's moratorium on any new taxation, and the proposal is known to have gained a following as the impact of the new law became more evident.

Treasury spokesmen made it plain yesterday that the measure itself would be drafted by the Treasury, although saying that they were "asking suggestions" from several other Federal departments.

Senate Swears Shott and Nelson For Short Terms

The November elections began paying dividends to the Republican Party yesterday when two new short-term Senators took the oath of office. One unelected a Democrat, giving the Republicans 39 seats to the Democrats 64.

Hugh Ike Shott, Jr., Bluefield, W. Va., publisher, was sworn in to succeed Joseph Rosier, West Virginia Democrat who held his office by appointment.

Arthur E. Nelson, St. Paul Republican, replaces Joseph H. Ball, Minnesota Republican, only temporarily. Ball, an appointee of Gov. Harold Stassen, won election to a full six-year term beginning next January 3.

On the same date, Chapman Rev-ercomb, Republican, will succeed Shott of West Virginia.

Minority Leader McNary presented the new Senators credentials. Senator Shipstead (Republican), Minnesota, accompanied Nelson to the rostrum where Vice President Wallace administered the oath. Rosier accompanied Shott.

PLANNED PROGRESS HAS MADE ROCK ISLAND ONE OF AMERICA'S GREAT RAILROAD SYSTEMS

Today Rock Island is hauling millions of tons of vital war freight every 24 hours. And we are equipped to carry even more! For Rock Island was prepared for war.

We were ready, because our program of Planned Progress, embracing expenditures of millions of dollars, has made Rock Island one of America's most modern railroads. That these were wise expenditures is clearly shown by our ability to rush unprecedented shipments of men and war materials to their destinations with maximum speed and efficiency.

During the past six years many important improvements have been effected to make Rock Island the great railroad it is today. Among them are...

DIESEL SWITCH ENGINES which, due to their flexibility and ease of operation, have simplified switching problems of vital shipping in classification yards.

"STREAMLINED" TRACK. After years of curves have been eliminated or "eased", heavier rails, ties and ballast have been used, grades have been reduced.

NEW EQUIPMENT has been added to rush vital war shipments to their destinations. When materials now on order are received, this efficiency will be further increased.

WARTIME TRAVEL—Because of troop movements and increased travel, we urge early ticket purchases and reservations. Cancel promptly if plans change.

Everybody top that 10% by New Year's

Your money is the greatest raw material of war. From it come planes, tanks, guns, ships, food—all the things that will enable our boys to bring this plague to the speediest possible end.

Pass the ammunition . . .

- ... to destroy the power of enemies who practice treachery, believe in slavery, tear down religion and strike at the vitals of the government of free peoples.
- ... to blast an enemy who lures our soldiers to death under a flag of truce.
- ... to stop a foe who razed Rotterdam and Warsaw and Shanghai and Lidice as "lessons to the people" . . . and would raze your town to blackened ruins, too.
- ... to ring the tyrants with bombs and bullets, with torpedoes and mines, with an avenging hail of metal.

... to get this terrible struggle over quickly and bring our soldier sons home sooner.

... to preserve for ourselves and our children a free America in a free world where the sea and the air are arteries of commerce, not combat.

This ammunition—money from all of us for bond purchases—is needed NOW. That is the reason for the Victory Quota drive until New Year's Day.

Twenty-two million Americans are loaning their money by purchases of War Bonds through payroll savings plans. They are buying up to 8% of their income.

But it takes thirty million people buying at least 10% to win this war.

Pass the ammunition. Your money is ammunition now. Pass it so that you can go on praising the Lord in freedom. Pass it so that your children and your children's children will praise the Lord that you made the sacrifice.

ALUMINUM COMPANY OF AMERICA

This advertisement is dedicated to all those loyal Americans, including our own employees, who are working together unselfishly in the great common cause for Victory.

How to do it Today

In this crusade, one thing that counts is REGULARITY. We must all pledge ourselves to buy bonds every payday or every month. The only way to make sure of this is to buy the bonds BEFORE we do anything else with our income.

You fall into one or the other of these classifications:

1. If you are employed where there is a Payroll Savings Plan—sign up today. Merely tell the paymaster or treasurer of your company to deduct 10% or more from your salary or wages for War Bonds. One extra advantage of this plan is that, in case of loss or damage to your bonds, your company's records will help you to have the bonds replaced by the Government.
2. If you are employed where there is no Payroll Savings Plan; if you are in business for yourself; if you are a professional man or woman or if you work anywhere or have your income from some source other than salary or wages—enroll today in the U. S. Treasury's Regular Purchase Plan. You will get a reminder, and a self-addressed envelope for your remittance, at whatever regular intervals you specify. Among the many places you can enroll are your bank, your Savings and Loan Association, your department store. You can even write direct to the Treasurer of the United States in Washington.

If you want more information about War Savings Bonds, write to the War Savings Staff, Treasury Department, Washington, D.C., or call your local War Savings Staff office (listed in your telephone book under "U.S. Government Offices—Treasury Department.")

How To Buy Your Tomorrow Today

Far-sighted people who buy War Bonds today will have the money tomorrow with which to buy the products of industry's "Imagineering": the revolutionary new automobiles; the new comfortable homes; the labor-saving household appliances; the new and improved aluminum cooking utensils; the television radios and all the flood of other things that war-sharpened inventiveness will throw open to us.

Right now Alcoa's Imagineering is devoted to producing aluminum that will help American planes fly faster, farther and higher than anything the enemy possesses . . . but the marvelous production of aluminum for war (nearly 7 times that of peacetime America) and the four war-time price reductions on aluminum, are among the things which are helping designers, architects, engineers to do the Imagineering that will make many of these things possible.

The pent-up demand for all these things will create the post-war market that will make jobs for our boys when they come home. The money which you and millions of other Americans are putting into War Bonds will then become the cash-in-pocket with which to buy the things everyone will want in peace.

War Savings Bonds are backed by the U. S. Government. They are the safest place you can put your money. A War Bond is a Government Savings Account that pays you interest. Buy War Bonds regularly to save for the things you will want tomorrow. Buy Your Tomorrow Today.

*Imagineering: a word coined by Alcoa from imagination and engineering; the art of planning today the things you will want tomorrow.

'For Me and My Gal' Tops Also for You and Yours

Judy Garland, George Murphy and Gene Kelly, With Prime Assistance From Marta Eggerth, Are Overwhelmingly Good at Loew's Palace

"FOR ME AND MY GAL," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture of a story by Howard Emmett Rogers, adapted to the screen by Richard Sherman, Fred Finklehoffe and Sid Silvers, costarring Judy Garland, George Murphy and Gene Kelly, with Marta Eggerth, Ben Blue, Horace McNally, Richard Quine, Lucille Norman and Keenan Wynn. Directed by Busby Berkeley. At the Palace.

IT IS NOT SURPRISING that in the hands of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "For Me and My Gal" should have turned out to be a "big" picture. All of the materials needed for an imposing entertainment are present and utilized to best advantage in the film opening this morning at Loew's Palace.

What is surprising about it is that Judy Garland, long one of the cinema's foremost juvenile singing comedienne, of a sudden should have developed into so splendid a young emotional actress. Not exclusively, but predominantly, "For Me and My Gal" belongs to Judy by virtue of an astonishingly varied, charming and emotionally powerful performance that tugs at the heart as often as it tickles the risibilities.

Three outlets for song, dance and drama have been availed of by Richard Sherman, Fred Finklehoffe and Sid Silvers in fashioning a bullet-proof script from an original story by Howard Emmet Rogers. The heartening and heart-breaking vagaries of vaudeville in its heyday, World War I, and a triangular romance of the fiber of legitimate drama, rather than the tinsel texture of frivolous musical comedy.

The story opens with a small-time vaudeville troupe detouring at a bleak little whistle-stop out in the "sticks." They are joined by the "headline act," in the person of an arrogant and acquisitive young four-flusher who is both heel and ham. Strangely enough, Jo-Hayden in time comes to love him. Jimmy Metcalfe, her partner, has always loved her. The dream of them all is some time to play the Palace on Broadway. How that eventuates has too much to do with the motivation, the humor and the pathos of the play to be disclosed to readers who might better build and enjoy their own suspense.

That is true, too, of the manner in which the war—the picture covers the period from 1918 to 1919—enters the lives of the principal characters, strips away the artifices of "show business" and reveals qualities of heart and mind that the earlier sequences have not intimated. Even the triangle does not adjust itself quite as those habituated to the conventional practices of musical comedy have been taught to expect. That's how "different" the picture is. If it gets a shade over-herotic and sentimental toward the end, it is too late to do any harm to an hour or two of complete enjoyment.

As a carnival of song and dance, "For Me and My Gal" is in a class by itself. Song and dance are not only indigenous to the story. They ARE the story. The old-time favorite tunes, revived with a spirit that expands the "moment that refreshes" into the full running-time of the film, would run up a pretty full catalogue of the hits of a gone but not forgotten day. The dances that accompany most of them would make even Terpsichore herself straighten up in her chair to learn something. And over it all is the nostalgic charm of reliving an era that gives slight promise of ever returning to the theater. There is, of course, an abundance of fun in the film, along with all that music and hooding, but there are also those occasional moments of authentic drama to give it body, substance and integrity beyond the measure of any ordinary "musical." The picture has everything.

"Show-Stopping" Newcomers in the Cast

To the interpretation of every facet of the many-sided plot, M.G.-M. has brought a cast of ideal selection. Judy Garland and George Murphy are known quantities who can always safely be taken pretty much for granted. But they go over and beyond that here by contributing the best individual acting performances, as well as singing and dancing, either has ever executed before the cameras. They still would be stars if there were not a song in the picture. But excellent as they are, they are no better than Gene Kelly, the "Pal Joey" of the Broadway stage, in his first appearance on the screen. For the first half of its length, his Harry Palmer in "For Me and My Gal" is more or less Pal Joey come back to life, but he goes on from there to establish himself as a figure to be reckoned with among the young actors who really can act. Another who has been absent from the American screen for so long that she returns as a virtual newcomer is Marta Eggerth, who sings exquisitely and acts with a warmth and charm that few can match. For the strictly comic touch there is Ben Blue, as reliable a funster as we have, and, in brief, but still important supporting roles, such as Keenan Wynn, Horace McNally, Richard Quine and Lucille Norman—plus male quartets, choruses, ensembles, the hordes on Flanders' battlefields, flashes of the great of the first World War, and in some of Judy Garland's activities a reflection of Elsie Janis, "worth a brigade of fighting men." Whatever it is you want, "For Me and My Gal" has it.

The super-excellence of the feature has not crowded the short-fel supplements entirely off the new bill at the Palace. In "Famous Boners," John Nesbitt offers a new release in his "Passing Parade" series, and by way of a cartoon comedy there is "Fine Feathered Friend." The picturized "News of the Day" runs the entertainment value of the program up to a conservative 110 per cent—10 above par for the course.

Jean Rogers Has Heart-Throb Role

Blonde Jean Rogers, who scored in "The War Against Mrs. Hadley," advances another step toward stardom with her newly won role as Richard Carlson's romance in "Mr. Justice Goes Hunting." Frank Morgan heads the cast, playing the role of a lovable, crusty Supreme Court Justice, who when diverted from a duck hunting trip uses his legal talents to break a corrupt small-town political machine, and promotes the romance between his secretary, Miss Rogers, and Carlson, a young lawyer.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Writes Her Own Ticket!

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 18 (INS). Jinx Falkenburg didn't know it, but when she wrote her experiences about entertaining the boys in the Canal Zone for a national magazine she "authored" herself right into a starring role at Columbia. The studio thinks so much of JINX FALKENBURG Jinx's life story from her modeling days and her wartime romance with Lieut. Tex McCrary on through the Panama junket that they are whipping up an original titled "Fabulous Female," in which to star her.

Don't forget that while Jinx was registering oomph down in the Panama camps and bases the Ritz brothers were supplying the comedy relief on the same trip. So don't be surprised if the three Mad-Zanies crop up in the same yarn. Universal has them under contract but Columbia should be able to attend to that little matter on a borrowing deal.

What Twentieth did with the adventures of a dress suit in "Tales of Manhattan" Warners are planning with a bomber, no less. In other words William Faulkner is already at work on an episodic picture temporarily titled "The Liberator," which will show the six stages a Liberator bomber passes through from the time it is constructed until it reaches the fighting front. Humphrey Bogart, in the role of the pilot, will be the only star running through the entire story, but almost every important actor or actress on the Warner lot will have a part in the various episodes.

Contrary to reports Jack Oakie and Venita, his estranged wife, have not been seeing one another since she returned to Hollywood. But they have talked on the telephone and Venita sent him a fancy flashlight for a gift.

Bette and the Boys!

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 18.—Bette Davis is scouting around for a building big enough to accommodate 600 of Uncle Sam's boys who come to Hollywood on weekend leaves without a place to sleep. There's a crying need for such a dormitory, because the town's so crowded on weekends that hotels can't accommodate all the servicemen.

Bette says it's not to be a social center, as the boys are already being royally entertained at the Hollywood Canteen, but will be a lounge where they'll always feel welcome and where they can be sure of a comfortable bed, with Sunday morning breakfast thrown in.

It's a big undertaking, but Bette's the gal who can swing it—and the motion picture industry will back her up all the way, or I miss my guess.

Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt have finally signed the contract to appear in "Stage Door Canteen," and Sol Lesser and Frank Borsage are mighty happy about the whole thing. The Lunts' sequence in the picture will be done in New York, where they're wowing the town in Sam Behrman's new play, "The Pirate."

United Artists are having the eleven-hour Hee-Hie-Jeebies over the Noel Coward picture "In Which We Serve." It's set for December 25 release, but so far they have received only one print of the picture, and there's no word of knowing when—or whether—the negative will arrive.

Virginia Gilmore, who's asking for a year's leave of absence from her contract, owned jointly by Twentieth and Sam Goldwyn, so she can do a play in New York, is now waiting for Sam's O. K. Twentieth has already given its consent.

Claudette Colbert, who's never spent less than a month on wardrobe fittings and tests for a new picture, got her wardrobe for "So Proudly We Hail" all set in 2½ hours and no wonder. As an army nurse lieutenant, Claudette makes her first appearance in a dark uniform with cape, then changes to a white outfit, and does the rest of the picture in a pair of cut down dungarees, shirt and regulation Army shoes.

Now that George Reeves has been chosen to play opposite Claudette in that picture, Harry Sherman has set him for a top role in "Wherever the Grass Grows," in which he hopes to star John Wayne.

Margaret Bert, former "Follies" dancer, is Metro's good luck charm. Harold Bucquet, Jules Dassin, Fred Zinneman and Fred Wilcox all used her in their first pictures, and they've done all right. Now Ray Boland is using her in his directorial debut—"Mr. Justice Goes Hunting."

There's more than a possibility that Metro may borrow Gracie MacDonald from Universal for the lead in "Very Warm for May." Gracie did the part on Broadway, and it got her that contract at Universal.

When Walter Pidgeon was visiting a friend in Canada, during his recent tour up there, he discovered on the mantelpiece a photograph of several Canadian officers, including himself, taken during the first World War.

He was so glad to see the faces of his former buddies that he talked his friend into giving him the picture, which now graces his own fireside.

Kay Johnson was doing a scene for "From Here to Victory," in which she was supposed to get angry at a blanket dealer for charging high prices. Director yelled "action!"—camera rolled—and Kay said nothing. "What's the matter?" asked Cary Grant. "Oh," replied Kay, "I got so mad I couldn't talk!"

Incidentally, Laraine Day is thrilled with her part, and claims it's the best she's ever had.

Maria Montez and Jon Hall, who are supposed to be feuding, certainly didn't act that way when I saw them on "White Savage" set. If a scene was muffed, instead of blaming each other, each claimed the honor. Ho, hum!

Jean Arthur, who's the shyest girl in pictures, parked her inhibitions the other day and invited 21 USO boys in to watch her do her big love scene with Joel McCrea. It's no snap to hll and coo for the camera with visitors on the sidelines—but the visitors loved it!

Marguerite Chapman should feel right at home playing the daughter of a chief petty officer in "Destroyer." She has four brothers in the service, two of them in the Navy.

John Steinbeck is doing his last writing job for the duration on "The Moon Is Down." He's working with Nunnally Johnson and Irving Pichel on the script, and goes into the Air Corps Intelligence soon.

It May Be a Global Struggle, But Hollywood Has It Covered

By Melrose Gower

Hollywood, Nov. 18.—Old Glory is in every corner of the world today—and Hollywood follows the flag. Today's smash headlines are tomorrow's smash hits.

Any American citizen can trace the history of the Hitler horror from conception to this week, merely by going to the movies. He who is interested in how the war started, soon can sit in his neighborhood theater and see Paramount's "For Wilcox the Bell Tolls." It will take him to Spain, the bloody testing ground for Axis weapons.

Republic has recently released "Flying Tigers," story of the volunteer American fliers who went to China's aid before we entered the war. "China Girl" has been completed at Fox. "China" is being filmed at Paramount, and RKO-Radio is preparing to send before cameras Pearl Buck's great story, "China Sky," starring Claudette Colbert and Randy Scott.

Events leading up to America's entry into the global conflict have been chronicled with dramatic faithfulness in Universal's "Eagle Squadron," already released, and RKO-Radio's "Flight for Freedom," story of the heroic flight of an American aviator (Rosalind Russell) on a Navy mission over Japanese mandated islands in the Pacific.

The Battle of the Atlantic is presented clearly, concisely, in four great feature films: "RKO-Radio's 'The Navy Comes Through,' Fox's 'Crash Dive,' Metro's 'Cargo of Innocents' and Universal's 'Corvettes in Action.' Theaters throughout the country now are showing 'The Navy Comes Through,' while the three other films soon will be on the nation's screens.

Warner's "Air Force" will take the film fan in imagination to Pearl Harbor, to the Islands of Midway, Guam and Wake, to Java and Australia. The same fan can journey to Turkey, Iran and Iraq by buying a theater ticket to "Background to Anger."

Paramount, which rang the bell with "Wake Island," now is filming "So Proudly We Hail," story of the heroic nurses on Bataan. The Battle of Java is told in Metro's "Pilot No. 5." The reckless daring of Great Britain's black-garbed night raiders will come to the screen in "Commandos Strike at Dawn" and "Secret Mission."

The scene of current American and British triumphs will be sketched against the blazing backgrounds of Africa, Libya and Egypt in "Sahara," "The Immortal Sergeant," "Malta," "Dakar" and "Casablanca," big pictures now in production.

The imaginative film fan even can visit Tokyo in safety. The only picture thus far conceived which presents a story based on Jimmy Doolittle's sensational bombing of that Japanese rat haven is RKO-Radio's "Bombardier," now being filmed under strict Army supervision. Costarring with Pat O'Brien and Anne Shirley, Randolph Scott meets an heroic death in Tokyo when his plane is shot down on the daring raid.

What goes on in the lands occupied by the Nazis, even in Germany itself? The answer will come to the screen in "This Land Is Mine," starring Charles Laughton; in Metro's "Reunion" and in RKO-Radio's "Hitler's Children."

His tires down to the treads, his gasoline gone, the dyed-in-the-wool film fan still can walk to the neighborhood once a week, and keep in touch with the international situation.

New York Calling—

New York, Nov. 18.

PHIL MURRAY: When you and Bill Green MARGARET MITCHELL make your speeches at the British War Relief dinner at the Astor, on November 24, the third voice heard will be that of Ernest Bevin. . . KATHARINE HEPBURN: Ethel Barrymore sympathized with your opening night troubles in "Without Love." She said: "An opening night on Broadway is like having a baby—nobody else can go through it for you." . . . USO CAMP SHOWS: Basil Dean, who is in charge of entertaining the British troops, arrived in America over the weekend. He's on a mission which will involve the spending of four million dollars to entertain not only British, but also American soldiers now abroad.

GOVERNOR EDISON: The Truman Committee soon will break a story about housing conditions in Jersey. . . EMILY POST: During a Hollywood reception for Mrs. Maxim Litvinov, an American-born Princess offered her arm-chair to the guest of honor. "Sit here, because you're the Ambassador," she stated. . . "But you're a Princess," Mrs. Litvinov reminded. . . "I wasn't born a Princess," the lady confided. . . "Well," replied Mrs. Litvinov, "do you think I was born an Ambassador?"

DRAMATISTS GUILD: Recently a group of the top American playwrights was organized to write a series of 10-minute plays for presentation in Army camps. The authors include Russell Crouse, Lillian Hellman, George S. Kaufman, Nancy Hamilton, Clifford Odets, Elmer Rice and Moss Hart. . . BERNARD BARUCH: Ingalls, who was one of your aides in the last war, now is heading the Small War-Plants division for New York. . . DEAN LANDIS: The air raid practice alert in Quebec was postponed last week, because Grace Moore was visiting with the mayor there. "I wouldn't want you to be stuck in the street, during the alert," the mayor told her later, "so phone when you get back to your hotel. And when I know you're safely in your room, I'll sound the alert."

SUMNER WELLES: A Spanish diplomat, who claims to be representing Franco, was tossed out of La Vie Parisienne Friday night, after pushing Clifton Webb and trying to disrupt Libby Holman's routine. . . LILLIAN GISH: When the messenger delivered that someone tree you sent, on opening night to Keith Frings, the author of "Mr. Sycamore," he told her: "People send the silliest things. Don't open this—it's a tree." . . MAYOR LA GUARDIA: There was a drive in Washington last week to give Jimmy Byrnes' Supreme Court job to Senator Norris—but it petered out.

GYPSY ROSE LEE: Barbara Stanwyck is having much trouble, in the screen adaptation of "G-String Murder Case." The Hays office refuses to allow her to strip. . . JOHNNY BRODERICK: Lieut. Thomas Moore, the Marine fier-hero who is back from Guadalcanal, has his postwar career all planned. He's arranging to join his father, brother and uncle, as a member of the New York police force.

SPYROS SKOURAS: Sam Goldwyn wanted Garson Kanin to direct some Greek plays. "Maybe," said Goldwyn, "the receipts will help restore the Greek democracy." . . "But Greece wasn't a democracy," Kanin reminded him. "King George ruled Greece." . . "Kanin," said Goldwyn, "I give you my personal guaranty that Greece is a democracy."

Films Go Musical; Metro in Lead

Music reigns in Hollywood today, and especially at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, where two top-flight musicals, "DuBarry Was a Lady" and "Cabin in the Sky," are completed. Already scheduled to begin shortly are "Private Miss Jones," "I Dood It," "Girl Crazy," "Best Foot Forward" and "High Kickers," and yesterday a sixth, "Anchors Aweigh," was added to the list.

The same studio recently completed "Panama Hattie," "For Me and My Gal" and "Presenting Lily Mars," each one highlighting song and dance.

"Anchors Aweigh" to be produced by Arthur Freed, will have a Navy setting and an all-star cast. Freed already has proved his ability in the musical field, with such hits to his credit as "Strike Up the Band," "Babes on Broadway" and "Panama Hattie."

A few years back, when Vichy was known chiefly for its export of mineral water, a French film was imported to these shores which was widely hailed as having incorporated the classic dance form of ballet into a successful motion picture. Now, after what seems like a few centuries, "Ballerina" returns to the Pix Theater to earn additional plaudits for its fine dance interpretations and excellent character portrayals.

An intimate sort of film, "Ballerina" is concerned with the strict disciplinary life led by the young apprentices to the ballet school of the National Opera in Paris. Weaned on the dance from the moment some fond parent saw in their offspring crawling around on all fours, a spark of terpsichorean aptitude, these children lived, breathed and studied dancing until the day when they could prove themselves acceptable to the most revered of the ballet institutions.

Following the tradition of selecting a "godmother" from among the star dancers of the ballet, young Rose Souris chooses the premiere danseuse, "Mademoiselle Beupre" as her idol, only to see her supplanted by a new dancer. Secretly opening a trap door on the floor of the stage, Rose is responsible for the permanent injury to Karine, the rival. Injured by her gull Rose runs away but is found and returned to study under the dancer whose career she has ruined.

Now in this country, Mia Slavenska plays the role of Nathalie Karine, the dancer who carries on her ruined life as a teacher. Her dancing is beautifully photographed and equally distinguished by her performance. Janine Charat is the child whose emotions cause her to

The WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

MR. JESSE JONES, in a letter to the publisher of The Washington Post, protests that statements made by Drew Pearson on November 13 regarding purchase of power by the Defense Plant Corporation are not true and Mr. Pearson has addressed a letter to Mr. Jones answering, from his viewpoint, the charges made by the Secretary of Commerce. The Post herewith presents Mr. Jones' letter and Mr. Pearson's reply.

A Letter

DEAR MR. MEYER:

The Washington Merry-Go-Round, released to you as a subscriber on November 13, once more—as has repeatedly been the case in the past—contained untrue statements about me and the work of the agencies under my supervision.

Defense Plant Corporation is not buying power from Arkansas Power and Light for the operation of the aluminum plant at Lake Catherine, Ark., at 9.95 mills, as the column states. The rate is 6.93 mills, based on a 95 per cent load factor. Power for two big aluminum plants in New York State and one in New Jersey is costing between six and seven mills. Defense Plant Corporation has contracted for privately produced power at the best price obtainable wherever public power was not available.

The column states that Defense Plant Corporation failed to make use of all the Government power obtainable from the FWA Grand River Dam in Oklahoma for sale at the low rate of 5.5 mills. The power was never available to Defense Plant Corporation at this price. Defense Plant Corporation is buying all of the power available to it from the Grand River Dam through the Rural Electrification Administration. It is paying REA 5.83 mills for the power, based on a 95 per cent load factor, and the Rural Electrification Administration now contends that this rate is too low, and has asked that it be raised. Both power contracts, made in cooperation with the War Production Board, are only temporary, as the aluminum plant is already producing half of the power it uses, and will produce all of it as soon as the machinery can be made available.

Eight Government-owned aluminum ingot plants throughout the country are being operated by the Aluminum Co. of America. As a basis for calculating the compensation to the aluminum company, power for these plants is figured at three mills, although a great deal of it costs Defense Plant Corporation only two mills. Eighty-five per cent of the profits from the plants, if there is a profit, goes to Defense Plant Corporation, and 15 per cent to the aluminum company. The column made an untrue statement about the aluminum contract on a former occasion, and was forced to make a public correction.

I request that you give this letter the same prominence that you gave the column to which it refers.

Sincerely yours,

JESSE H. JONES.

And a Reply

DEAR MR. SECRETARY:

I have seen a copy of your letter of November 14 in which you charge me with untruths when I stated on November 13 that the Federal Power Commission had scheduled a hearing to investigate the purchase of power by your Defense Plant Corporation from private power companies at the high rate of 9.95 mills, and then turned round and sold it to the Aluminum Corporation of America at Lake Catherine, Ark., for only three mills, when you might have purchased power much cheaper from the Government's own Grand River Project in Oklahoma.

In reply let me say that I cannot help it if the Federal Power Commission chooses to investigate your operations. I note you do not deny that this investigation has been scheduled, though twice your people have been anxious to get it postponed, and it is now set for December 14. Furthermore, the figures quoted in my column were from data before the Federal Power Commission, which obviously has some reason to doubt the accuracy of your figures or they would not be investigating.

May I suggest that you re-examine your figures to make sure that your subordinates have not made some mistake. Being a very busy man, with the entire Department of Commerce and all the ramifications of Federal Loan Administration under you, I realize that you cannot handle all of these matters personally. Therefore, it occurs to me that some of your subordinates may have made the same mistake regarding power which apparently they made regarding rubber.

For instance, you say that you are getting all the power you can from FWA's Grand River Dam. Yet, I believe your subordinates will tell you that as early as last December the Federal Works Administration, which uses the same taxpayers' money as your Federal Loan Administration, was ready to sell you most of the power you needed for Alcoa at Lake Catherine. Yet, your people turned down this cheaper Government power, and finally in February, 1942, split your power requirements between Grand River and the private power pool organized by Arkansas Power and Light, the company of your late friend, Harvey Couch, who served with you on the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

In other words, the Government was ready at Grand River to handle almost all of Lake Catherine's outside power needs at a cheaper rate, and yet you, a servant of the Government, contracted for a large part of your power needs with a private company at a higher rate.

Then, last August 2—your subordinates will, I am sure, confirm the fact—when it came time to turn on the power at the Lake Catherine aluminum project, you would not take power from the Government's own Grand River project, but took it instead entirely from the private power company pool. Your excuse at the time was that the Government had no circuit breakers to make the connection from Grand River, which was true. However, you, a part of the Government, had some circuit breakers of your own which you would not lend to another branch of the Government.

Finally, on August 12, a conference was held with your subordinates at which the FWA, Rural Electrification, and Federal Power Commission put such pressure on your Defense Plant Corporation that you finally loaned the circuit breakers, and the Grand River power on August 21 was hooked up.

But during that 19 days of delay, the Government lost around $100,000, for during that time Grand River had saved up its water, expecting to supply your aluminum plant in August. So, being unable to connect, it had to dump its water at the dump rate of one mill to the private power pool. Then your friends of the Arkansas Power and Light et al. turned round and sold this one mill power back to you for 9.95, and you turned round and sold it to Alcoa for only three mills.

Thus the Government lost on every transaction. I note you do not deny that you are selling Alcoa power for only three mills, but you do deny that you are paying Arkansas Power and Light 9.95 mills. Instead, you say you are paying them 6.93 mills. Even at your own figure, however, there is quite a gap between buying power for 6.93 mills and selling it for three mills.

However, experts of the Federal Power Commission do not accept your 6.93 figure, which apparently you arrived at by figuring on a 65,000-kilowatt load, whereas you have only been taking 32,500 kilowatts from Arkansas Power and Light. Figuring on the actual amount of power used, I believe your subordinates will confirm the fact that the actual cost to the Government for private power was around 9.95.

In conclusion, I cannot see why, if the truth is on your side, you should become so concerned about the Federal Power Commission's investigation. If you are right, a wholesome investigation should prove your position to the public. If the Federal Power Commission's figures quoted in my column are wrong, then the investigation will so prove.

However, I am awfully glad you wrote your letter to all my newspapers. It is a very important document because it admits officially for the first time that the Government is getting no price benefit from Bonneville Dam, Grand Coulee and all the other public power projects built at large expense to the taxpayer.

You state that you are selling the aluminum company power for only three mills, because in some places you are buying for as low as two mills—which, of course, means from Bonneville and the public power projects. In other words, the cheap two-mill power you get from the taxpayer is actually used to counterbalance, if not finance, the higher six and nine mill power you get from Niagara and Hudson and from Arkansas Power and Light. One objective of Congress in voting these big public power projects was to bring rates down throughout the country. But, now, under your setup, private power rates continue high and the aluminum company is the chief beneficiary.

Very sincerely yours,

DREW PEARSON.

Michael's Girl

By SOPHIE KERR

Chapter 38

THIS brought him a clear sense of change within himself, of understanding new ways, new patterns, almost as if from actual death he had come back to life. He knew he would seek death no more now that he had found his motive for it so trivial. He came downstairs with his arm linked through Van's arm, vital and young and warm. He had been saved to life by a child and his own child was his binding-chain to that life, tight, secure. How could he have dreamed of killing himself while Van was here. Van, his son!

That night he tore up all the notes he had made for a new office, all the figures he had meant to lay before Channing Park. That was done. And he slept as he had not slept in weeks.

In the morning he woke empty-minded, but refreshed, and still keeping his sense of change and renewal. There persisted, too, the surprise quality of the cottage. It had been so oddly pleasant there that in his idleness he loafed toward it again late in the morning with a vague wish to find out what, exactly, had affected him. The place was deserted. Letty was, of course, at school and Michael was nowhere about—not that he wanted to see either of them—but presently he heard faint sounds coming from the garage beyond the dividing hedge. Curiosity drove him to go on.

One of the five doors was open and Michael was there before a huge pile of potatoes, picking them up, brushing them roughly and sacking them. He nodded a short good morning.

"Good crop?" asked Philip idly.

"First-rate. Enough to eat on all winter and a few sacks over to sell."

"Oh, that's why you put them in sacks."

"Baskets is better, but we got the sacks. There's a fine root-cellar in the big house. They can't stay out here any longer for fear of a cold snap."

He went on working and the simple, monotonous task fascinated Philip. He said suddenly, "How about if I helped you?"

Michael looked up, amazed. "Well—I don't know—you mayn't be well enough to stand this, Mr. Bryant. It's pretty hard on the back, and you're not used to it." He turned back to the work, dismissing Philip's offer as a whim not worth attention.

"I think I'll try it," Michael shrugged. "There's the sacks," he said. "You can take this turn piece to wipe off dirt. They ought to be put away clean. Throw out any bad ones and any with cuts." Out of the corners of his eyes he watched Philip's efforts. It's the first time in his life he ever touched a raw potato, he thought, the first time he ever worked with his hands.

Philip Ashamed Of Soft Condition

It was true and Philip's hands resented it. They were soft and the dirt got under his nails and on his wrists and his flesh crawled at the touch. But he forced himself on doggedly. The sack flopped and slithered away from him until Michael showed him how to roll the top down. "Pull 'er up as she fills," said Michael.

Philip nodded. Sweat of effort covered his face and soon there were long, sharp pains in his arms and a stab in his back. His breath was short, too. For the first time he was ashamed of his condition. I used to play 36 holes of golf and never know it, he thought. I couldn't do nine short ones now. How did men stand it who worked like this every day, all day, week in, week out, year after year. Michael's powerful leanness moved strong and easy beside him. He could slap me down with one finger, thought Philip. He made another shameful discovery. There was a rail at fat around his midriff that pushed against him every time he stooped.

"Don't do too much, Mr. Bryant," said Michael. "I'm a little behind with my odd jobs because of so much to do in the greenhouse, but I'll get caught up, gradual."

"How did you ever come to raise so many potatoes?" puffed Philip. "There's enough here for a regiment."

"Maybe I did overdo a little, but it's a good potato year. You can't ever be sure. You can plant and water but God gives the increase, my mother used to say. Anyway, Miss Elin wanted enough vegetables raised to keep the kitchen going. We do pretty well, except melons; this soil don't like melons, none that I've ever tried. I wish I could get seed of the melons like they have in Spain, the long ones with greenish insides touched up with yellow along the top of the slice. They're melons."

"Have you been to Spain?" asked Philip.

"I've touched at the ports. Barcelona, Tarragona, Almeria, Malaga, Cadix, Vigo, Coruna, Bilbao. Then I was a sailor."

Why, he's traveled much more than I have, thought Philip. He asked, "Do you like being a gardener more than being a sailor?"

Michael thought, What's got into him, helping me with the potatoes and asking? I'm not his friend, nor ever was. Aloud he said, politely, "Well, work is work, wherever you find it. A man's got to have it, some kind."

Philip was silent. A man's got to have work, chimed very well with his present mood. Michael was silent, too. Presently he brought round his big wheelbarrow, lifted a sack of potatoes into it with one hand, then another, and another. "I'll take these to the root-cellar," he said. "They're taking too much room here." When he had gone Philip tried to lift a filled sack, but it took both hands and all his strength. Again he was ashamed.

After lunch he came back and worked until the sacking was done in a blank, dogged effort which barred talk and, better still, barred thought. When the task was finished he went wearily to his room and soaked out some of the ache in a hot bath and then slept for an hour because he could not, absolutely could not, keep awake. When he woke it was dinner time and he ate with a relish, but said nothing about what he had been doing; he didn't want their surprise, perhaps their amusement. He didn't want them to feel that their petty activities had driven him down the same line.

The next morning he was much pleased with himself to find that his muscles were only a little stiff. He wasn't entirely washed up, then, he wasn't a broken-down doddler, not yet! Usually he sat about all morning and dawdled through the papers, but today he flung them aside after a glance. He dug out a pair of golf slacks and a thick sweater, put them on with his heaviest shoes and went down the drive to the cottage again. Michael was in the greenhouse now and Philip approached him bluntly.

"Is there anything else I can do on the place?" he asked. "I need exercise."

Michael was working at his rose plants, searching for insects, pinching buds, clipping delicately for shape, turning them about for proper air and sun. So the Mister was at it again! A new game, this was. He waited a moment, considering. "There's dead wood to be cut all through the hedges and the shrubbery," he said, at last, "and the borders to be dug up, and some transplanting—but that you could hardly manage, I think."

Mutual Dislike Is Evidenced
"I suppose I can manage to cut out dead wood."

Michael got down the large and small pruning shears and handed them over. "You'll need the both of these and maybe the little saw, but these'll start you off. Would you please fetch them back when you're done with them, Mr. Bryant?" He indicated the niche for tools where shears, saws, rakes, trowels, dibbles, forks, packets of stakes and bundles of raffia were arranged in close, orderly battalion. As Philip started to leave, Michael said, "Mr. Bryant, you'll need gloves on your hands. The hedges got tough thorns. Would you loan mine?"

Philip looked with distaste at the pair of thick, soiled gauntlets. "I've got some old driving gloves that'll do," he said shortly. He don't like me a bit better than I like him, thought Michael, watching him go, and that's all right. It even things up on both sides.

Philip got his gloves and then made the discovery that pruning shears are a delightful implement and there is a peculiar satisfaction in snipping and cutting at thick, refractory bushes. When the handle of the small shears began to hurt below his thumb, he took the big ones and when, in turn, jerked too hard at his biceps, went back to the small ones. The hedge stretched before him infinitely, days and days of work, and though his pruning was neither clean nor even, it could do the heavy old growth no harm. Presently he had a heap of cut-off branches and wondered what he ought to do with them, but that problem was solved when Van came home from school. "I'll rake up all this stuff and we'll burn it later," said the boy capably and then, with open admiration, "Gee, you've done a lot."

One of the qualities of master players is their ability to solve tough bidding and playing problems right on the spot. Most of us can figure out the answer, given enough time, but the card table is where it counts, and today's question is a good one.

Answers to Quis
1. Holding both distributional strength and an ace, South would be wise to make a jump bid at three hearts. Two hearts is too weak, as South would make this call if he held only four hearts and no strength at all. A four-heart bid is likewise unattractive, for North may pass; whereas a slam looks possible with South holding a seven-card heart suit and first-round control of both clubs and diamonds.

2. Although South holds the ace-king of the opponent's suit, he has no other values and must pass. He should not take any action until his partner has rebid. In some cases partner's suit is raised with as little as three small trumps, but in this situation South lacks favorable distribution, such as a short suit for ruffing a long one.

3. South makes three no trump by holding up on the first club lead. He reasons that if West holds five clubs and East the diamond king, he will lose his game by taking the first trick, so he plays small. East returns the club five and declarer puts on the jack. West wins with the ace, as he knows his partner is now void.

South is assured of his game, however, for he has three spades, two hearts, one club and three diamonds, the diamond finesse losing to East's king. If declarer had won the first club lead, East would have returned his second club on getting in with the diamond king and the defense then would have run four club tricks for down one.

When Husband Comes Home to Give Her a Kiss, Young Wife Must Force Herself to Respond, Because His Neglect Has Chilled Her Devotion

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married for three years to a man whom I have loved very much and who in turn loves me, I am sure. He works very long hours six days a week, so that Sunday is the only day we have together. He has two "nights out" each week, going bowling one night; and to a meeting of a men's club of which he is a member, another night. Sundays, he prefers to visit a mutual friend of ours, whether I go or not. We have a baby, six months old, and before the baby came, I went with him on these visits,—not so much because I wanted to, as because I didn't want to stay home alone.

Now that we have the baby, however, it is rather hard to get ready to spend the whole day away from home with the baby,—especially with no greater incentive than to visit a person (every Sunday) for whom you have only a casual liking. Consequently, my husband goes alone and the baby and I stay home. There are other people I would like to visit occasionally; or I would enjoy just staying home with my husband on Sundays, once in a while, and fixing dinner for the two of us. When I suggest such plans to my husband, he always says, "There's nothing I'd rather do,"—than visit this friend, he means.

or says he is just too tired to do anything but read the newspapers and go to bed. Now, you will probably think I am a nagging wife and that this is the reason why he is not much of a companion to me. But I assure you this is not the case. He often tells me what a good wife I am; and says he doesn't know what he would do without me. And I am positive there is no other woman involved.

My husband is several years older than I am; but he is far from being an old man. I realize he works hard and needs his rest; but the point I am making is that he is full of pep when going bowling, to the club meetings or to this friend's house. He often tells me that he is home. We have been out together only three times in the last six months. And this can't be due to my appearance, either. I am considered very attractive. I have thought of every possible explanation; and, much as I hate to say it, I am forced to believe my husband is very thoughtless and even slightly selfish.

I enjoy staying home; but not every day and practically every evening alone. I do go to a movie with a girl friend, now and then, but I am only 23 and I would still like to go out dancing with my husband and have fun. Generally when my husband goes out without me, I am irked for a little while (he doesn't always know it); but the mood soon wears off. However, since he left me alone this past Sunday, I haven't been the same. It's hard to explain. I am not angry at him, but I just feel cold. I have no particular feeling for him. When he comes home in the evening and kisses me, I have to force myself to respond. I don't want to feel this way, but I just can't help it. Please tell me which of us is to blame; and tell me, also, how I can correct the situation. Sincerely, R. W. B.

Coming Estrangement Casts Shadow Before

DEAR R. W. B.: You have correctly diagnosed the source of your trouble when you say, hesitantly, "I am forced to believe my husband is very thoughtless and even slightly selfish." Except that you have undervalued the degree of his selfishness in calling it "slight." His performance on the social front comes near to being 100 per cent self-centered and self-serving,—so that it is no wonder a chill blight is overtaking your love of him. Far from being a nagging wife, it appears that you have been, up to now, rather too sweetly indulgent of his obstinately inconsiderate behavior.

My conviction that your husband is principally,—and perhaps wholly,—to blame for the shadow of coming estrangement that has existed since last Sunday, is supported by a news story I read today, of a couple, wed 29 years, who just missed divorce by a hair's breadth, before coming to the saving realization that what they needed, in order to be happy, was not to separate but to have more "dates" and more fun with each other. While their divorce suit was pending, this couple devoted 30 days to trying out a "separation" imposed set of 10 commandments for reconciling their mutual grievances.

At the end of that 30 days' trial period, they asked the court to dismiss the suit, explaining that they were "sweethearts again," as a result of faithfully observing the following rules: 1. The husband must take his wife dining and dancing every Wednesday night. 2. He must take her to a movie every Sunday night. 3. She may bet on the races, up to a $2 limit. 4. The couple should separate one evening a week, spending their time with friends of the same sex. 5. The husband must come home to dinner in a good humor. 6. He must buy his wife a complete outfit each season. 7. He must not go out with other women. 8. He must not exchange presents with other women. 9. He must not strike his wife. 10. He may drink, but not too much, on Saturday nights only.

'The Little Niceties' That Keep Love Alive

Giving all credit for their new-found happiness to the wife's lawyer, who drafted the rules after studying the complaints in her divorce petition, the couple admitted: "Twenty-nine years of marriage had made us forget the little niceties." And the wife added, while her husband nodded approval, "We both look forward to Wednesday nights. He always takes me some nice place and we wait and wait. I love to wait; but up until the time we adopted our 10 commandments, I hadn't danced in nine years. I never knew life could be so wonderful." The couple lives in Chicago, by the way; and (according to the United Press account) have now torn up the written rules of behavior, saying they are "engraved on our hearts."

—Apropos of your just grievance, this story proves two points, namely: One, that the burden rests with your husband, not with you, to remedy the situation; and two, that his neglectful brand of conduct, if stubbornly continued, leads slowly but surely to the divorce court. This being the case, I think the time has come for you to rise up in righteous indignation and demand reasonable consideration, as the concession he must make if he wishes to enjoy your favor. It is his craven and self-defeating hypocrisy,—and not sound marriage-building policy,—to pretend contentment with his terms; or to force yourself to respond to his caresses, when you are so deeply (and justifiably) offended by habitual selfishness as to shrink involuntarily from his casual embrace.

—Whether from choice or on principle, the fair-playing, genuinely devoted, normally considerate husband usually doesn't leave his wife to her own devices more than one night a week, while he seeks bachelor diversion; and certainly never for the whole day Sunday, week in and week out. The man who does so is showing either a disloyal or irresponsible attitude toward his partnership obligations; and is therefore forfeiting claim to a tenderly companionable response from his wife. It is time your husband digested this fact and behaved accordingly, if he does indeed feel that he couldn't do without your loving ministrations.

—And I think the psychological moment has struck for firmly stating your grievance and demanding a new deal. Your present mood of emotional detachment toward him gives you precisely the advantage needed for making an impressive case on your own behalf. So act honestly, in accordance with the dictates of your momentary distaste for him. Let him see how you feel, by turning a cool cheek to his kiss. And,—when he asks, "What's the matter?"—explain clearly the origin of your "don't-care" attitude, making plain that it has been slow developing, but has by now reached the danger point. A treaty palaver probably will follow that break-through; and it would be well to prepare for it accordingly, by drawing up your own suggested list of 10 commandments to govern the family's social life hereafter. Show him the list; and ask him what amendments or substitutions he would make. But assure him in even tones (free of heat, entreaty or heartache) that, "this, or something like it, has got to stand, from here on out, if you are the least bit interested in keeping my love. If you're not, we can drop the whole matter, of course; but at least we will then understand each other; and know what NOT to expect from each other."

Mrs. Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Order Limiting Production of Kitchen Tools Cuts Out Gadgets, Leaves Only Essential Items

By the Associated Press

The War Production Board has prohibited, effective November 23, production of thousands of kitchen tools and utensils made of iron or steel.

Taking the final step in a series of orders designed to conserve metals going into kitchen gadgets, the order eliminated—as far as iron or steel is used—such common items as bottle openers, cork screws, dippers, sieves, bread boxes and jugs.

In hundreds of other instances, WPB permitted continued production on condition that metal use is cut drastically.

For instance, the small amount of metal allotted for can openers will be sufficient to make only the cutting part of this tool, necessitating wooden or other substitute handles.

The order applies, except in a few instances, to kitchenware manufactured for the armed forces as well as civilians.

Since the manufacturers and stores still have large quantities of these items, however, the result of the order may not become apparent to civilians for several months.

Newly-weds may be the first to feel the pinch, because of their usual necessity of starting out with the purchase of new kitchen equipment.

A WPB summary of the order said:

KITCHEN TOOLS—Production to be limited to eight items, strainers, can openers, egg beaters, food mills, food choppers and grinders, and commercial type cake turners and basting spoons. However, metals for these items restricted to 35 per cent of amount used in the 12 months ending June 30, 1941.

STORAGE EQUIPMENT—All common household storage items made of iron or steel prohibited, including vegetable bins, canisters, bread boxes, cookie containers, cake boxes and metal jugs. Vacuum bottles of 1 quart or less to be made at half of normal rate, primarily to supply war factory workers. Large vacuum bottles and jugs reserved for military use exclusively.

PAIS—Production with iron and steel limited to a few standardized models of galvanized and enameled ware.

MISCELLANEOUS—Use of metal prohibited entirely in making rising pans, pot scourers, and similar sink accessories, dust pans, silent butlers, crumb sets, washboards, clothes wringers.

Limited by a previous order was galvanized ware, which includes such items as the kitchen garbage can and the farmyard water pail. This order also restricts, effective January 1, all products made of iron or steel which have plain, japanned, painted, lithographed or lacquered finishes. Production has been cut off as far as watering pots, radiator filling cans, measuring cups and pans, dippers, ash sifters, coal hods and scuttles, trash receptacles. For the next two months garbage cans, pails, fire buckets, shovels, funnels, refrigerator pans and kerosene storage cans will be manufactured. These, however, are limited as to size and amount of metal to be used, and the production cut to 50 per cent based on the average monthly output in the year ended June 30, 1941.

After January 1, the output of galvanized ware will be further cut to permit the manufacture of only six items.

Enameled ware, also limited in production, will continue to be manufactured in order to take care of the most essential requirements in the home, the restaurant and Army and Navy kitchens. The permitted items are: coffee boilers, steam-table insets, kettles, ladles, water pails, steam-table pans, percolators, sauce pots and pans and roasters.

Cast iron kitchenware has been cut from the production of about 200 items to approximately 12. Production has been restricted to the following: skillets, griddles, household kettles, sugar or wash bottles, buttering kettles, Dutch ovens, muffin pans and corn or breadstick pans. Flatirons also are permitted.

New Jobs for Women

Army Hires Them as Inspectors of Planes

By Sigrid Arne

Wichita, Kans. (AP)—She was blond and 20 and dignified. We met in the office of the Cessna Aircraft plant here at the end of her first day in a new job. Her name was Edith Grabill, and until she came to Wichita she had clerked in a Newton, Kans., 10 cent store.

She said slowly, "They let me inspect three radios today. It's a terrific thing to know that a man's life may hang on what you do. But I took it slowly. I passed all three radios as perfect."

Then she had sat and hid her shivers as the senior Army inspector, a man, went over her work to see if she had done her job. She had.

The next day, and for many days to come, she would do the same thing. Each day she would handle more radios. Finally she'd be on her own.

Maybe in three months the Army will assign her to some other part of a plane. She'll go through the same routine, until she's letter perfect on some other part.

That girl, on that job, is another sign of the manpower shortage.

The Army Air Force has its procurement headquarters here for 13 States. There's a large, but unannounced, number of plane plants under them. They must place many inspectors in each plant. Those inspectors must go over every part of every plane, piece by piece, to see they're perfect before the Army buys the plane; and before the first pilot takes it up for the test run. The fact is, each plane is combed down twice; once by a company inspector, and finally by an Army inspector.

The Air Force officers here have kept a list of men and women capable of holding such jobs. But up until this summer they'd hired only men. Then the list gave off ominous signs. There were very few men; plenty of women.

The Air Force officers decided to take the leap: hire women inspectors. They combed the four huge plane plants in Wichita and pulled out 12 women who had done top notch work.

The inspectors' jobs pay $1440 to $1890 a year, more for overtime. For some of the women selected that meant higher wages. For some it meant less money. But for all of them it was a chance to give the best they had to the war. And these are Midwestern women with pioneer backgrounds.

They hopped at the chance. The Army put them through a stiff two weeks course with the senior plant inspectors. Then they went to work.

There was some trouble at first. Men plane makers hit a few ceilings when the ladies refused to pass their work. But the Army had coached the women to take it easy; and to quietly explain how to correct the defect. That turned the trick, the ladies knowing what to do about it. Now the ladies are accepted.

The Army is rotating all of them. They hope to train all of the women so that in the end, they can pass on all of the thousand and one parts that go into a plane.

Just one woman, so far, has been given the responsible job of checking moving parts. She's slim, red-headed Henrietta E. Merrill, an M. A. from Columbia University, who taught English in Wichita schools until this year. She would rather teach, but she "had to do something about the war." It took some sacrifice. All last spring she taught all day, caught some sleep in the early night hours, and then went to an aircraft school from midnight until 7 a. m.

The Army officers at Wichita report they are pleased with the way the women have measured up. They report further that Army men in other divisions are watching the experiment. The officers expect that half their inspectors soon will be women. Maybe more.

Women Have a Great Stake In This War Says School Head

By Nannie H. Burroughs

President of the National Trade and Professional School for Women and Girls in Washington, D. C.

Women have more at stake in this war than men have.

First—the lives of their husbands, sons and sweethearts have been laid on the altar of sacrifice.

Second—it is their war because it is a war against the suppression of the weak.

Third—they will lose the great gains in economic, social and religious freedom, for which their sex have been fighting ever since Eve came out of the garden of Eden.

Fourth—the security of the homes and welfare of every child that will be born unto them are at stake.

Women love these four gifts as dearly as they love life itself. It is their nature to fight for the things they love. The hour has struck when they must turn out and fight Hitler with everything they have, including the kitchen stove.

Our Government is asking for, and must have, a loan of 10 per cent of the earnings of every citizen. This is a pittance to lend ourselves (the Government, after all, is ourselves) for the purchase of freedom and justice for all men everywhere. Why does the Government need the loan? Because this war is staggeringly expensive. It is fierce and furious. It will have to be fought on all fronts. Liberty is in mortal danger of perishing from the earth and it will perish unless 130 million Americans put all they have into this titanic struggle.

Hitler's philosophy of life isn't worth a dime, but we will have to take him and his philosophy unless women ring every doorbell, button-hole every wage-earner and contact every citizen and enlist them all in a fast and furious campaign for four specific purposes:

1. Buy bonds.
2. Make bombs.
3. Stamp hell out of Hitler.
4. Give democracy a new lease on life and rebuild a wrecked world on freedom and justice for every man, woman and child on this planet, regardless of race, creed or color.

If this is done, Hitler and his philosophy of life will be done for.

Women Produced Weapons for Africa

London (By Cable).—Behind the British First and Eighth Armies as they smashed their spectacular way through North Africa and Egypt was another army at home in England—the workers in the Royal Ordnance and other factories who had turned out the guns to make that advance possible. And a great part of that army behind the armies was made up of women.

Working in day and night shifts, they completely revolutionized all previous ideas as to the time required to produce guns.

So poochie won't wander off while the master is buying food and dog biscuits, a Denver store has equipped its exterior with a "hitching post." Nipper waits longingly for his mistress who must chain her pet outside to comply with the local health ordinance.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

String beans can be served in attractive ways. Here we find them forming the border on a vegetable platter. With cauliflower in the center, carrots, and string beans surround to make a dish that is pleasant to view and just as pleasing to eat.

Streamlined as a string bean, but well-rounded (nutritionally speaking) as a silver dollar, is the dish savory string beans.

They are easy to prepare and easier to eat. Despite their long, lean figures, green beans have important food value. And when their green vegetable goodness is added to the highly concentrated protein value of cheese and eggs, plus a cream sauce, the result is a highly satisfying main dish.

In this year when versatility, economy of foods and effort, high nutritive values, combined with special appetite appeal, are the sign posts of good cookery, savory string beans will fill the bill on every count.

But let's plan a menu that will include this green bean dish. Look for some sea bass in the fish market, or use frozen fish, and bake it to a turn. Then the rest of the meal-getting will be easy. Here's a suggested menu:

Here is a recipe for baking the fish:

BAKED SEA BASS

Clean a four-pound sea bass, place in baking pan and sprinkle inside and out with salt and pepper. Lay three strips of bacon on top of fish. Place around fish two halved onions, two quartered tomatoes and two green peppers cut in rings. Add one-half cup hot water in bottom of pan. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about 35 to 45 minutes, or until done. Add one cup water as fish begins to brown. Let tomatoes, onions and peppers cook down and serve as sauce with fish. Approximate yield: six portions.

SAVORY STRING BEANS

Make a cream sauce of 4 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons flour and 2 cups milk. Add three-fourths of a pound of American cheddar cheese that has been shredded. Stir until cheese is melted. Season with salt and pepper. Place 2 cups hot-cooked seasoned whole green beans on a platter and cover with the sauce. Sprinkle with 1/3 cup chopped onion and the remaining shredded cheese. Place under the broiler and heat long enough to melt the cheese. Serve at once.

HONEY-BAKED PEARS

Wipe and peel 6 pears that are not very ripe. Leave whole or quarter and core. Cook 1/2 cup honey with 1/2 cup water. Add the pears and cook slowly, covered, on top of the stove or in casserole in slow oven, 300 degrees, until tender but firm. Hard winter pears require about 1 hour or more. Serve hot or cold with cream.

Nutrition Is Power,
If You Put It to Work

By Ida Jean Kain

You know a lot more about nutrition than you did a year or so ago. You know all vitamins, and you know something about minerals and protein and carbohydrates. But how much of what you know are you using? Are you going right along with your same old ways of eating? Knowing, as Sir Richard Gregory has said, is like energy. It is capable of doing work, but first it must be changed from the potential state to the moving state. That's the way it is with nutrition. You know so much more about nutrition than you use every day.

We must put this nutrition knowledge to work to win the war! This applies not only to the housewife, but to the working girl, whether she eats in a restaurant or cooks at home. It applies to the working man, whether he carries his lunch, orders it from a counter or eats in a restaurant, or travels on the road. It means everybody. There will be fewer planned menus, and more a la carte bills of fare. This is to save food. When food is left on the plate it is wasted. Waste of food hinders our war effort. It doesn't help for anyone to eat more food than is needed; it helps to order only what you need and can eat.

Get the essentials first, for they are the ones that give more power. Have the three meals furnish the complete list of protective foods—that's the way to put nutrition to work. You need at least two fresh fruits a day. All right, get them somewhere in your three meals. You should have three vegetables, one a green leafy, the others can be any vegetable you like, and potatoes or some other starchy vegetable. For good nutrition you need an egg a day, or four a week. You can have your egg at breakfast or at lunch or dinner; it doesn't matter, just so you get it. You should, somewhere in your three meals, have four to six slices of whole grain or enriched bread and butter. The amount of bread you need depends on whether you are trying to gain weight or helping to lose. But everybody needs a little bread; the reducer should have four slices, the normal weight six slices and the thin person at least six slices.

How much milk do you actually get every day? Milk or cheese daily is essential to good nutrition. The thin girl needs at least three glasses, a full quart a day is better; the normal weight must have a pint and the reducer needs a pint. If you are trying to keep your calories down, take buttermilk or skim milk and make up for the lost vitamin A with a green leafy salad or a cooked green leafy vegetable. But if you delete the vitamin A in butter fats and leave off the greens, you are more likely to catch a cold. Have a green vegetable every day. The day's menu should include a serving of lean meat, fish or fowl. Don't get the idea that you cannot live up to the rules of good nutrition with meat rationed. By having fish or fowl in addition to the meat ration, you get ample protein for your needs. In the past a good many of you ate too much meat and not enough of the other protective foods.

Use what you know about nutrition. Use it every day. Put it to work to combat fatigue, to give you more energy, and to help win this war.

USE IT AS YOU WOULD AMMONIA

THE WHITE HOUSE

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

The most important home in America (and, no doubt, the world) has survived more strange happenings, big events, weird and constantly changing tastes, whims and general upheaval (plus fires) than any house in the world. Since 1800, when John and Abigail Adams took possession, the White House has held its own through remodelings, furnishings, intrigues, births, deaths, weddings, funerals, state banquets and family breakfasts. In fact, sentimentalists insist that the Executive Mansion exerts more influence on its inhabitants than they on it.

It's not a pretentious building as such places go. In fact, many a private dwelling or governor's mansion outshines it in size and grandeur. Yet, in a city of massive and spectacular buildings, it holds its own and outshines many an architect's monument. Designed by an Irish-American, Hoban, in 1792, its first mistress was Mrs. John Adams, who felt herself considerably put upon because of its inconveniences. Thomas Jefferson was more intrigued by improving its grounds than with its livability, for his heart was at Monticello. Dolly Madison added greatly to its furnishings—and rescued its portrait of Washington (remember?). Through each administration the White House absorbed and discarded—ending up in Roosevelt's regime with as hopeless a hodge-podge of tastes, fancy and otherwise, as any house has ever been called upon to suffer.

The lusty Teddy decided to end all that (incidentally it was he who first called it the "White House"). He pushed through the modernizations and pushed out most of the vast accumulation of furnishings which the preceding Presidents and their ladies had assembled. Mrs. Lincoln's overextravagant draperies... President Grant's spread-eagle fire screen... Mrs. Cleveland's mantel lambrequin, complete with fringe and tassels... and Mr. Fillmore's Tiffany glass screens.

The present Roosevelt regime has not changed the White House as much as did the "Oyster Bay" clan—in fact nothing, save President Jackson's Indian friends, can quite come up to the hooting, shouting, roller-skating "White House Gang" of Roosevelt I. And the wedding of "Princess" Alice to Nick Longworth was the culmination of a happy family's stay in the famous home, an event to make even the old walls happy. The present incumbents' contribution to White House tradition includes the President's love for gadgets... and a hang-up modern kitchen, supervised by the First Lady, complete with electric ranges and underground food storage vaults. In 1936 all ancient wiring was replaced along with outmoded plumbing.

What tales the "White House" walls could tell... of birth, death, deep family happiness and sordid family squabbles... of children's voices and hushed conferences and the bang and swish of carpenters and painters... altogether a tale of American family life, out of the very top drawer.

Sugarpie, the new Victory doll, gives an answer to Santa's worry over what dolls can be made without use of war materials.

Nonpriority Doll Is Triumph Of Design and Ingenuity

What's the doll of tomorrow going to be made of?

Realizing that the grim needs of all-out war production spell the end of traditional methods of doll making after present supplies are exhausted, doll designers and scientists joined forces to tackle this production dilemma before Santa Claus' pack was emptied of little girls' favorite playthings.

The result is Sugarpie, the cute, cuddlesome Victory doll made of nonpriority materials who makes her bow this Christmas. After present supplies are exhausted, there can be no more of the elastic which traditionally joined doll arms and legs. The steel parts required for movable eyes were doomed, too, for the duration. Kapok, the usual doll stuffing, was needed for life preservers. The accustomed imports of hair from China for doll wigs were shut off and even lambskin used in dolls' round-head wigs was all being commandeered for aviators' clothing. Glue shortages forecast curtailment of the production of composition dolls.

America's ample cotton supplies transformed by science and utilized with artistry will be the mainstay of the world of dolls next season, the designers forecast. Sugarpie, the new Victory doll, has a body sculptured to look exactly like a real child with dimpled knees and adorable fat arms and the skin is springy to the touch without the use of rubber. It's a triumph achieved by a new method of doll stuffing. An entirely new way of suiting and sewing gives this natural look. Featherweight stuffing has been developed from a cotton derivative that is as light and springy to the touch as the traditional kapok now needed for essential war use.

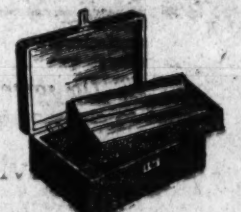

Sugarpie's hair is another triumph of science. It is actually more serviceable than real hair and it's made from yarn chemically treated to give the effect of crisp, naturally curly hair that's amazingly realistic. Sugarpie's eyes have the depth and expressiveness of the moving eyes that can't be made any more because of steel priorities. This

Meat Mistakes

This is no time to buy a mistake in meat. To get your money's worth, watch for these unmistakable signs of quality: Beef should be bright red, close grained, and have a firm, even covering of fat. Veal should be light pink. Lamb is at its best when pink with creamy or pinkish fat. Top quality pork is pale grayish pink, close textured, firm, flecked with fat. Light colored liver is best.

Electric Pad Requires Care To Do Good Job

For health, relaxation, and for sheer general comfort, an electric warming pad is a most satisfactory appliance. And they are easy to care for if you remember the following:

Lay the pad on the part of the body to be treated and cover with only enough clothes to retain the heat desired. Both the length of time and the temperature at which it is used should be checked by a physician.

Keep the warming pad in a cool, dark, dry place when not in use. Never use pins or other metallic means to fasten it in place. Do not crush the pad, or fold more than necessary, even when not in use. Carry it by the pad itself, not by the cord. And never allow it to get wet.

When you can't get to sleep, try putting the pad at your shoulders and the back of your neck. It's wonderfully effective.

RAINBOW AROUND THE SHOULDERS

By Jeanne Contini

There are all kinds of ways to keep warm, one of which is the school of huddling or sitting with your feet in a tub of hot water. However, we prefer a shawl as an accessory for effective central heating. First, because it adds another layer of warmth to your clothing... according to veteran frost fighters this is the surest and most comfortable system. Layers of warm but not bulky garments allow the air to circulate and permit freedom of movement. Then, shawls are distinctly feminine and very pretty. We're glad women have a good excuse to wear them.

Naturally our job takes us in and out of stores every day, and lately we've noticed the astonishing number of people clustered around the scarf counters. We took it as a cue to look for the best shawls available from the standpoint of beauty and value, and present the results to our readers. Consider what fine Christmas gifts these would make. Please call National 4200, extension 324 for further information.

Here is a hand-crocheted triangle in pure wool, one of the gayest, brightest shawls we found. Wear it around your shoulders, with wool dresses, sweaters and slacks. Over your hair, it will keep the wind out of your ears at football games, winter sports, wardening, in short anything that has you exposed to the weather for long periods. The scarf is made in three colors with contrasting fringe. We especially liked it in pink, green and purple, but it can be had in several other combinations... about $3.

We've recommended stoles before, mostly on a basis of decoration. This one is warm as well, being made of a loosely woven knobby yarn and fashioned into an enormous rectangle. Wear it over suits or dresses. It's a piece of insulated elegance for any costume in your wardrobe... around $7.

This silk and wool scarf is as weightless as a piece of chiffon and surprisingly warm. The weave resembles shantung, but feels soft and fine to the touch. We show it draped around the shoulders of a dress, and thought a flower pulled through the knot would look charming, but we didn't sketch it that way for the sake of clarity. You might try it, however. The scarf is broad enough to use as a shawl but so soft you could tie it into a bow-knot to wear with your suit. It comes in muted colors like olive green, cocoa brown, etc... around $4.

Here is a lacy square shawl, lovely and fragile enough to wear over a dinner gown, or as a mantilla. It looks like the precious Shetland shawls woven by the island peasant women. There are a very limited number at present but the store who has them is trying to order more. It is particularly beautiful in a soft shade of dusty pink and costs around... $5.

Development of Children Beyond the Age of Two

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

THE 2-year-old baby has advanced quite a way along the road of life. It began as a little animal that could not even roll over or raise its head, and can now stand and walk alone, grasp objects, do things—not very purposefully—with its hands; it can see and focus, and has learned to coordinate the movements of both eyes; it can hear, tell what direction a sound is coming from,

and even knows the significance of a few sounds.

Eating training at two years old should have progressed to the place where the baby comes to the table hungry.

He will feed himself, clumsily and spilling a good deal, but managing to get quite a lot into the mouth. He may tire from the effort in the middle of the meal and have to be helped in order to get all he should have.

Toilet training should begin to bring results at about the age of two. Parents, as a rule, expect too much of children about this. They should not make an issue of it at any time nor inflict punishments.

The average 18-month child cannot be expected to take much responsibility. It is up to the mother to see that he gets to the toilet in time. He will have many accidents, but by 18 months should have a hazy idea of what is expected of him. From then on the normal child learns rapidly. By four years, however, any child should take full responsibility for his toilet needs.

Social contacts and cooperation are of slow growth. The two-year-old plays by himself. You see two two-year-olds on opposite sides of a sand pile. They are playing, but not playing together. At four they play together, even in groups, but only for a few minutes at a time. Then they rest, do something by themselves, but are soon ready at someone's suggestion to start a new game.

Your Baby and Mine

Grandmother Writes About Discipline

Has a grandparent a right to whip her grandchild? A parent poses this question and writes despairingly of her mother's strong convictions on this subject and her own resentment of them. "My mother's mother died when she was twelve and she grew up in the family of a sister who had nine children. These children say today that they were raised by their mother and aunt (my mother) by virtue of a barrel stove."

"Now my mother wants to take my son of 16 months to keep him while I get a much-needed rest. I am afraid she will spank him. In fact she says that she will, any time he needs it. I don't want my boy treated that way. He never has been. We have exchanged angry words by letter over this. What is your opinion?"

Your mother isn't likely to change at her age. But if you object to her methods of discipline, avoid any controversy by keeping your boy at home, or by putting him in a nursery school for the day hours. You are fortunate in living in another town where you can have some control over the situation, unless you deliberately foster it. If you do allow the child to visit your mother and make her responsible for him, I cannot see how you can prevent her from disciplining him as she thinks best.

As a contrast, in the same mail was a letter from another grandparent with opposing views.

"I am an old lady of 83 and I don't suppose my way will be printed since it takes patience, kindness, study and intelligence. 'I've been reading your discussion of discipline. May I say that my two boys only had six apiece. I held them out over the toilet when they were tiny babies and they were soon trained. I was a trained nurse before marriage and I kept my children from disease and colds by giving them cold baths. They were both born in winter and I began at birth to bathe them and each day made their baths a wee bit colder. By two weeks it was cold and I rubbed them to a glow afterward.

"They always had hot cereal for breakfast, toast and butter, eggs, peanut butter and some fruit and also a good meal at night. They went to bed at seven-thirty right up to high school age, over the protests of the family.

"I have five healthy grandchildren. People won't believe it but they have never had a sick day. They set hot baths in summer and cold baths in winter. They are solid and muscular."

One can gather that good food played no inconsiderable part in their splendid health. An ill-fed child would react poorly to such Spartan practices. But, I must protest that this department's sole aim is to encourage just the maternal practices you recommend. I'm happy to find grandmothers of your age in accord with such a program.

Send Your Soldier Boy a Book, But Make It Something Light

By Genevieve Reynolds
The Post Club Editor.

So you want to send a soldier a book. If that is your desire, do select a short one, preferably a detective or mystery. You can't go wrong with a detective, for that seems to be the service man's first choice. At least that is the observation of Serg. Dan Smythe, well-known New Hampshire poet and naturalist, now working in the War Department here.

"Soldiers don't have time to read long books or stories," he explained. "They like something that they can pick up and finish quickly. Small pocket editions always are welcome."

While the majority of the uniformed men consider poetry tripe, the poet soldier does find a sprinkling of poetry enthusiasts. But what type of poetry do they like? Well, Sergeant Smythe, who considers Walt Whitman the greatest poet, finds that Tennyson's, Whitman's and Longfellow's writings are the soldiers' favorites—with Tennyson in the lead. Definitely, they don't like the modernistic variety—much prefer the older, more established poets' works.

An admirer of Whitman, Sergeant Smythe confesses that he is a bit disappointed that more of his buddies in uniform don't like the renowned man's works. In fact, he does quite a bit of arguing on the subject. For he is convinced that Whitman's ideals of democracy yet will prevail.

Nearer and Nearer

"We haven't yet reached the poet's great conception of democracy," he said. "But we are drawing nearer and nearer. After the war the goal will be more nearly attained."

One thing is sure after Sergeant Smythe's lecture, "Walt Whitman, Poet of Democracy," given before members of the Woman's Club of Arlington yesterday, at least 100 more women went home to read and to understand his poem on "Democracy." The youthful speaker read and interpreted many of Whitman's poems.

Referring to Whitman, Sergeant Smythe averred: "He thought the greatest things were democracy, love and religion. But he spread himself on everything—friendship, nature, appreciation, the common man, invention, health, good nature, 'the divine soil.'"

Sergeant Smythe, who hails from Plaisant, N. H., is considered one of New England's leading poets. Many of his poems have appeared in the leading magazines of the country, including Saturday Review of Literature, Yale Review, Scribner's. Also, you might remember reading some of his poems in The Washington Post.

In 1940 his poem, "Cows at the Bars" won a $50 prize given by the Poetry Society of America. His first book, "Steep Acres," will be off the press December 15.

A Mountain Climber

Before entering the Army, Sergeant Smythe divided his time between writing and farming. Despite the fact that he gets about 50 poems a year, he says the income derived is too small to live on. But then, he loves his farming; likes nothing better than to be out of doors. Mountain climbing is his favorite sport.

Asked if the arduous duties of Army life left time for creative writing, Sergeant Smythe reeled off a number of things that he is working on at present. Besides a group of poems on Army life, he has started a book, "Selectees" (prose), dealing with his adventures in four Army camps. Then he is keeping a daily journal. Also, he is keeping up his work with his friend—and teacher—Robert Frost. By the way, he studied under Frost at Harvard.

The occasion at which Sergeant Smythe appeared as guest speaker was a tea given by the Fine Arts Department of the Woman's Club of Arlington yesterday, which was held at the home of the club's president, Mrs. Leonie Gilbert, 1714 South Lowell Street.

8 and 40 Takes Vow to Fight On Home Front

Addressing the partners of the District of Columbia Eight and Forty, Salon Departmental, at the Washington Hotel last night, Chapeau Departmental Mary Corwin said, "We are grateful to those who have fought and those who are fighting to preserve the things for which our country stands; we cannot match their sacrifice, but through devotion to our organization we can do our full share to keep the home front strong and thus sustain the fighting spirit of our United Nations."

Mrs. Rae R. Zaontz, La Superintendente, and the salon's quartette, Mrs. Ellen Louise Warren, Miss Emily Carey, Mrs. Vesta Rodrick, and Mrs. Ethel Fowler, led the partners in the song of the month—"There's a Long, Long Trail."

Child Welfare Chairman Mrs. Virginia McCarthy will be in charge of Thanksgiving activities, and the partners will prepare Thanksgiving baskets for needy families.

The fun and fellowship committee of the Eight and Forty met Monday night at the home of Mrs. Della Luther to formulate plans for the forthcoming seventeenth birthday celebration of the founding of the local salon.

Mrs. Luther, as chairman, and her committee, Mrs. Laura Lipscomb, Mrs. Lucille Cuneo, Mrs. Frances Snow, Mrs. Pauline Chambers, Mrs. Pearl Heagerty, Mrs. Helen Shafer, Mrs. Carrie Kiser, and Mrs. Eva Carrico are making the arrangements.

Jewish Juniors To Give Dance

An informal dance will be held on Thanksgiving Eve, November 23, by the Washington Section, National Council of Jewish Juniors, at the Almas Temple, 1315 K Street Northwest.

Harold Fields' orchestra will provide music for dancing from 9:30 to 12:30 p. m. Games will also feature the evening's entertainment.

Proceeds will go to several of the organization's worthwhile philanthropies.

All Souls' Annual Bazaar Set for Today

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Wigram, president, Rector's Aid Society, All Souls' Memorial Church, on Cathedral Avenue, announces the annual Thanksgiving dinner and bazaar will be given today, 5 to 8 o'clock, in the Parish Hall.

"Ceiling prices will prevail, but none of the standard Thanksgiving items will be omitted from the menu," according to Mrs. H. C. Kerslake, vice president in charge of buying. "All wartime table restrictions will be observed," she added. "With so many of our men in the service, this is a 'must' in our group."

"Money donations have leaked into the treasury steadily, in advance, so the dinner price will be a net revenue for the church. Some donors paid for a whole turkey, some for a leg, and some only contributed the price of a wing. All together, the 'parts' make enough great American birds for Thanksgiving," reports the treasurer, Mrs. William Sterrett.

Following the dinner there will be a bazaar offering a varied supply of pretty and useful articles designed for Christmas gifts, and early mailing. The chairman, Mrs. John W. Burke, and her assistants have made most of the articles. Seen recently at Mrs. Burke's home on Kalorama Road, the display of needlework is worthy of their grandmothers' time. Baby clothes and useful bags are "musts" on this table.

Mrs. Charles Martin will conduct a delicatessen shop, specializing in home-canned fruits and vegetables, jellies, jams and preserves, made in modern home kitchens from old-time and wartime recipes. Aprons and household gadgets will be featured.

Thanksgiving desserts, highlighted with apple and pumpkin pies "like mother made," will be dispensed by Miss Ethyl Clarke, Mrs. Thomas J. Howerton, Mrs. Hugh Brown, Mrs. William C. Hunt, Mrs. Lippincott, Miss Nena Loub, Judge Virginia H. Mayfield and Miss Mary Cox.

Miss Anne Sterrett, daughter of the rector, mobilized a group of young people for a grab-bag table for everything from plastic jewelry to pictures and neckties.

Mrs. Robert Ghormley, Mrs. H. C. Kerslake and Mrs. Broadbent are gathering flowers and "white elephants" for sale. Mrs. H. H. D. Sterrett, a member of this committee, promises some lively trading around this table.

Beverly Hills Red Cross Branch to Give Tea

It's another tea with a purpose. The Beverly Hills branch of the Alexandria (Virginia) Red Cross is sponsoring a silver tea this afternoon, 3 to 6 o'clock, at the Community Church on the old Dominion Road in Beverly Hills. Proceeds of the tea will go to help furnish 500 comfort kits for servicemen who are going on foreign duty.

On exhibit at the tea will be some of the paintings of talented Mrs. Anna Lunn of Beverly Hills.

Mrs. Lunn was educated in Copenhagen and for several years designed and painted for the Royal Art Porcelain Manufacturing Co. After leaving Chicago, where she had her studio, Mrs. Lunn settled in Pasadena, where she continued her art work for 18 years.

Ohio Wesleyan Women Arrange Parley Saturday

The Ohio Wesleyan Monnett Club, women's graduate association to aid in scholarships for the university, opens the year's activities presenting Dr. Wesley Gewehr, professor of history of the University of Maryland, at a 1:30 luncheon meeting Saturday, at the Methodist Building, 110 Maryland Avenue.

Any new Ohio Wesleyan University women in Washington are urged to come. Reservations should be made by calling Glebe 1226 or Glebe 2829.

The new officers for the ensuing year are: Marjorie Shaw McCormick, president; Ruth Highy Austin, secretary, and Grace Putnam, treasurer.

A. A. U. W. Dinner Slated Tomorrow

The American Association of University Women will entertain tomorrow at a reception and dinner in honor of the national board of directors. Speaker at the dinner will be the Countess L. I. Zamoyka of Poland from the Inter-Allied Information Center. She will discuss "The Work of Women in the Occupied Countries."

Countess Zamoyka was born in the Western Islands of Scotland, educated in London and completed her studies in the Free City of Danzig. After marriage to a Polish citizen, she lived through the siege of Warsaw, in September, 1939, afterwards being interned in Poland. She reached England in December, 1939, arrived in the United States in September, 1940. She is a lecturer on the war and her personal experiences in the war. At present she is an officer on the executive staff of the Inter-Allied Information Center.

MAN OF WAR

Lieutenant General Lesley J. McNair—

Ground Forces Chief Turns Out Modern Corps

This is another in a series of stories about men who are running the war. The next, to appear, on Monday, will be about Rear Admiral John S. McCain, chief of the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics.

By Patricia Grady

"The brains of the Army..." That's Gen. George C. Marshall's appraisal of his good friend and righthand man, Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, Commanding General of the Army Ground Forces. And General Marshall is by no means alone in his judgment of this quiet, forceful officer who has been largely responsible for turning out a modern army to do a modern war job.

Briefly, the mission of the Army Ground Forces is to create units and train them so that they are fit to fight," explains this sandy-haired general with the terse simplicity that is his outstanding characteristic. "The units then are turned over for employment in theaters of operations."

In keeping with his citation for the Distinguished Service Medal, which reads, "... he displayed marked ability in correctly estimating the changing conditions and requirements of military tactics."

General McNair refuses to be hidebound by nineteenth century concepts of fighting. Methods of war have changed and General McNair is determined that the United States soldiers should learn the new fighting techniques and better them.

"The World War was a static one," he points out. "It was more a matter of crushing by sheer mass. Equipment was comparatively simple. Today a division must be more versatile, more artful. It must be smarter, swifter, more flexible and adaptable, in order to meet the endless array of situations which must be faced. The airplane and the tank loom large in the picture and make life complex and uncertain."

Known as "Pick-And-Shovel Man"

According to his own description, General McNair is a "pick-and-shovel man." He is only interested in getting things done, and with the least possible fanfare. One of his aides characterizes him this way: "You can always tell what the general's answer to a request will be by asking yourself, 'Will it help the war effort?'"

With little patience for the formalities of administration, General McNair scribbles his answers to many a letter at the bottom of the page. Wordiness annoys him and oratorical eloquence is not in his sphere. No one has yet succeeded in writing a speech that he will deliver. The files are full of moving orations, written for him, that he has discarded in favor of his own simple addresses, often batted out by himself on his home typewriter mounted on a packing case in the study of his Army War College quarters.

The general is usually the first officer to arrive at work, being at his desk well before 8 o'clock, and when he leaves in the late evening his much-traveled tan briefcase is bulging with "homework." Brisk and athletically inclined, the general hasn't had much time since Pearl Harbor to indulge in his favorite sports of golfing—his scores are in the low 90's—and riding. He still manages to get away for a weekly canter with either Mrs. McNair as his riding partner or his boss, General Marshall. As for his social life, his job doesn't leave time for parties, and the one gala event he has attended in many months was the opening of "This is the Army."

Slight of stature, the general has the decided, yet undramatic, bearing of a military man. Neither pomp nor ceremony are in his vocabulary and when he wants to speak to a member of his staff, he'll step down the hall to the subordinate's office and ask him to come in. A real traveling man—General McNair likes to take a personal look at training units—he has shocked many an officer by stepping from his plane informally blouseless and ready for work, much in the tradition of his classmate, Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell.

Born in Verndale, Minn., the son of Scotch Presbyterian parents, General McNair will tell you, "My boyhood dreams were of the Navy, but my efforts in that direction resulted only in an alternate appointment. The West Point opportunity came along about the same time. I won an appointment and decided to take it as second choice."

Graduated eleventh in a class of 124, in 1904, his Army career has been spectacular in its simplicity. During the World War, he became the youngest brigadier general in our Army in France at the age of 35, reverting after the war to his permanent rank of major. He accompanied the Funston Expedition to Vera Cruz and the Punitive Expedition to Mexico before sailing for France. On his return he was an instructor at the General Service School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., served in Hawaii, and as a professor of military science and tactics at Purdue University, where he was given a doctorate of laws.

Makes Plans For Modern Army

It was in 1937 that General McNair worked with the PID, the organization responsible for the present streamlined setup of our Army. "In 1937, the Second Division, reinforced from other stations, was organized into the so-called Proposed Infantry Division, for extended tests of the new triangular organization which was developed into the present triangular division," General McNair comments. "At that time I was commanding the Second Field Artillery Brigade. Since the PID contained no artillery brigade, I functioned

Gen. Marshall Calls Him 'Brains Of the Army'

during the tests as Chief of Staff of the PID. The tests were extensive and took place over a period of some six months, under a variety of conditions. There was a great quantity of motor movements, since motorization was one of the novel features of the new organization. An extensive report was rendered at the conclusion of the tests."

This is modesty itself on the part of General McNair. What he did not point out is that the PID, under his leadership, made the plans and experiments on which the new Army was based—more than two years before war broke out in Europe. It was for his leadership in this job that he was given command of the Ground Forces when the new organization went effect last March.

No longer theoretical is the estimate of the kind of job General McNair has been doing. The success of the American Army in North Africa, made up of trained men doing the work they have to do with initiative and efficiency, is a magnificent testimony to "the man behind the men"—Gen. Lesley McNair.

Senator's Wife To Launch Liberty Ship

"This time I haven't done any practicing."

Mrs. Walter F. George, wife of the Senator from Georgia, hasn't had to take any practice swings with a champagne bottle to get ready for her ship christening tomorrow. She comes under the head of "experienced help," after sending the S. S. Surprise down the ways last year.

She will leave for Savannah, Ga., today to launch the James Oglethorpe, a Liberty ship, and afterward will go on to Vienna, to spend a few days there before returning to the Capital. Mrs. George feels it is quite an honor to be christening a ship named after that famous founder of her State. She will have as her matron of honor, Mrs. Arch Lovett of Savannah, wife of Judge Lovett.

Senator George is hoping to accompany his wife to Savannah and to be present at the event, but he is not yet sure if he can get away from his busy desk. If he goes, he expects to return to Washington immediately after the christening.

At First Press Conference Since Return, Mrs. Roosevelt Reveals Impressions Gained on Trip to Britain

"I am glad I went... because I learned a tremendous amount. And I came back with enormous pride in the fact that human nature can rise above the little inconveniences of life... the things that seem to bother us the most. It all proves that when you have to face anything, you can do it."

Thus did Mrs. Roosevelt draw to a conclusion her press conference yesterday, the first she had held since her return from England early this week. Before that she touched on the high points of her trip: gave a detailed account of a typical day of touring factories, visiting hospitals and making speeches; mentioned her talks with members of America's armed forces, and pointed out the difference between the way of life in England and in America today.

On the lighter side, Mrs. Roosevelt described a number of amusing incidents, beginning with the one in which a British newspaperwoman, worn weary with trying to keep the First Lady covered, finally put to the visitor a pointed question.

"Don't you ever spend a morning in bed, Mrs. Roosevelt?" she asked.

"Not when there's so much to see, and do," was the answer.

"Oh," sighed the reporter, "we did so hope you would."

Voicing a few general impressions gathered on her visit Mrs. Roosevelt mentioned:

1. That any visitor from America to England today is struck by the obvious difference in the way of life there and here. There, one purpose—winning the war—seems every act, word and deed. "We've got to get on with the war," is what one hears on all sides, from persons in every walk of life, the First Lady said; while in America, where the pressure is not so great and has not been taken in account for such a long period, the war effort is not always so obvious.

2. That war has brought a complete change in all phases of British life. "And that goes for every person from those living in Buckingham Palace to those in a cottage on the Clive," she said. "Every person has a job. Every woman, whether she wears a uniform or not, is held responsible for a definite contribution to the war effort."

3. That every Britisher is fired by enthusiasm and a dogged determination that "This work has got to be done... and done fast," that losses of brick and mortar mean nothing at all in a time like this; that nobody thinks of complaining about being bombed out of his home, unless some member of the family was injured in the bombing.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she doubted that "certain types of luxurious living" would ever be possible again in England, and she mentioned that war, the great leveler, had already succeeded in bringing people of all classes together had helped them to get acquainted with each other; had promoted understanding between them. She told of spending a night in a mansion where the lady of the household was living in only one corner of her house, maintaining a fire in only one room, and running a nursery for 35 children under 5 years of age with only the help of a cook and an untrained farm girl.

"Of course the place was as cold as Greenland," commented Mrs. Roosevelt, "but the children seemed to be used to it, and nobody appeared to mind."

On the subject of the British climate, the First Lady had a lot to say. She was thoroughly chilled, for instance, before she had been in London a week. For the first three days of her visit, she "reviewed everything" in a steady rain and was "completely soaked" in so doing. She finally contracted a cold, "but that was more because I was tired than anything else," she said, and both she and her secretary, Miss Malvina Thompson, left their hot-water bottles with friends in England by way of doing a small bit to increase the warmth for at least two people there.

The food? Well, meals are dull but adequate in Great Britain, according to the First Lady. Whether you're eating at Buckingham Palace or at a British government restaurant, you have only three courses—soup, fish or meat (usually mutton), potatoes and one other vegetable (carrots or Brussels sprouts). "I hope I never see another Brussels sprout," she said; pudding and tea, and sometimes fresh fruit.

"The average man and woman are getting better balanced meals today than before the war," Mrs. Roosevelt continued. "Every school child has a hot meal at midday by government arrangement, and every child has so much milk each day." It is possible to get quite a good meal in the British restaurants for the British equivalent of 30 cents, she went on. The whole food problem has been worked out with great care and is extremely well done she concluded.

American soldiers in the British Isles? They're making friends on all sides, Mrs. Roosevelt reported. "The younger boys are having the time of their lives; the older ones are faring less happily, since they generally miss their families and home comforts more." One paratrooper asked Mrs. Roosevelt if it was true that the people back home had no gas, and no meat? But on the whole, the boys in uniform seemed happy and full of enthusiasm for the task ahead, she said.

Toughing briefly on her visit with the royal family, Mrs. Roosevelt mentioned incidentally that she was greatly impressed with Princess Elizabeth's serious attitude and the questions she asked about America and its way of life in the current struggle. She told of the numerous expressions of gratitude for warm clothes sent from America. She spoke of standing one day on the cliffs of Dover, thinking that "only 23 miles from here is the enemy," and she finally confessed that for once in her life she was so tired at the end of one crowded day of touring factories, hospitals and nurseries that she honestly didn't feel her feet could carry her another day. "But of course they did," she added brightly.

And what about the report from Britain that she had to put wrapping paper in her shoes to reinforce the soles? That, said Mrs. Roosevelt, had absolutely no foundation in fact. During her entire visit she wore the same walking shoes she had on at yesterday's conference... and they were in very good condition.

Purely Personal

Mrs. Roosevelt came back with many ideas as to what should be done in this country, but she declined to elaborate on them yesterday. She was greatly impressed with the planning for postwar life in England, and mentioned that Bevan told her that no factory was built today without plans for its specific use after the war. She made it clear that she went to England to see what the women are doing, and to visit American soldiers and hospitals—not to "do errands" for the President. But she did do one before it was over—she brought, from Scotland, a tin box filled with shortbread, sent to him from the Royal Scottish Women's Auxiliary.

Nell Alexander Married to W. T. Rockwell

Miss Nell Alexander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Alexander, and Warren T. Rockwell, son of Admiral and Mrs. Francis W. Rockwell of Washington and San Diego, Calif., were married last evening, the ceremony taking place in the chapel of St. Patrick's Episcopal Church, with the Rev. Francis Warren officiating.

The bride is the granddaughter of the late Urey Woodson, Allen Property Custodian. She was graduated from Holton-Arms School and George Washington University. Mr. Rockwell attended Leland Stanford University and is a graduate of Georgetown University Foreign Service School. He is now with the Board of Economic Warfare.

Mrs. Alexander gave her daughter in marriage. She wore a white tulle gown trimmed in lace with lace edging the long pointed sleeves. A fingertip length tulle veil was held by an orange blossom coronet and she carried an old-fashioned bouquet of white chrysanthemums and gardenias.

Mrs. Edward Tiken, cousin of the bridegroom, who was matron of honor, wore a green velvet gown with a headpiece of matching ostrich tips and a short veil. She carried an arm bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums.

The bridesmaid was Miss Mary Ellen Degnan, who was in gold velvet with an ostrich tip headpiece and veil of the same color. She, too, carried yellow chrysanthemums.

Serving as best man was Lieut. Cooper Dawson, U. S. N. R., and the ushers were Maj. Urey Woodson Alexander, brother of the bride; Maj. F. H. Walton, United States Air Corps; Lieut. Rudolph Shulick, U. S. N. R., and Louis M. Lind.

Mrs. Lawrence Tibbett Works On 16-Hour Day Schedule

Chairman of United China Benefit Grateful for Cooperation

The days aren't long enough for pretty Mrs. Lawrence Tibbett, wife of the opera star, when she has a job to do.

Sixteen hours roll around the clock before she calls it a day, her work all for the Cheer China benefit to be held tomorrow night at the Radio City Music Hall in New York. Virtually every screen, stage and radio star available at that time will put in an appearance on the program.

The name Lawrence Tibbett appears on the long list of names of those who have volunteered their services. But Mr. Tibbett will be in Chicago on that date.

"What if I don't get back in time?" he asked Mrs. Tibbett before he left on tour.

"Then I go to Reno," his wife replied. "I'm a very severe woman."

Mrs. Tibbett is chairman of the midnight benefit, proceeds of which will go to United China Relief.

"No one can complain in these times," says Mrs. Tibbett. "I've put in 2½ months on this and I feel sort of as if maybe I had contributed something. And then I run into people who are working twice as hard for the total war effort. It is simply amazing the way everybody is at least trying to do something."

Deeply grateful to the stars in the entertainment field who are giving their time and services to make the show a success, Mrs. Tibbett has found a heartwarming spirit among these people.

To WOMEN Who Don't Have To Work

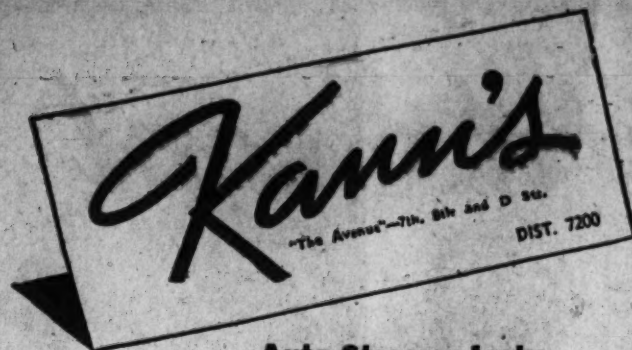

- This is a message to the Mothers and Wives of Washington . . . to the Women who don't have to work!
- We realize that you aren't very much interested in taking a job . . . just earn a few dollars.
- We realize, also, that your chief concern is the maintenance of your home and family . . . and we applaud you for that.
- But we wonder if you realize that the war-effort has taken countless thousands from the ranks of business . . . and that it is vitally important that the men who are serving in the armed forces be replaced by patriotic-minded civilians.
- The fact of the matter is: There are jobs to be filled. If we are to maintain an adequate distributive system . . . and filled by our civilian population . . . even those who don't have to work.
- And that's where you come into the picture!
- You can turn your SPARE DAYS into War Bonds . . . as many days as you have available . . . and this is how:
- Take a job . . . and take your Salary in War Bonds!
- For every day that you work, we'll credit you with the exact dollar-value . . . and every time your total adds to $18.75 you'll get a $25 Bond.
- You'll be performing a double service.
- First: you'll be actively replacing a man who is bearing arms for Uncle Sam on the far-flung battle-fronts of the world.
- Second: You'll be buying War Bonds . . . and doing your part to supply the bullets, the planes, the tanks, the guns that will bring us Victory.
- Let's make no bones about it.
- If you are a Mother or a Wife . . . one who doesn't have to work . . . and one who isn't interested in cash (as such) we'd like to recruit you for active service on the Home Front . . . and pay you dollar for dollar, penny for penny, in War Bonds . . . Bonds which will pay you back $4 for every $3 at maturity.
- We hope that the suggestion interests you. If it does, won't you get in touch with our personnel director, and arrange the working days that will suit you best.
